The Seafood EMS Communication Kit

... to help to gain recognition for EMS achievements and gain community support

Seafood Services Australia Ltd is proud to bring you, in this publication and others in the series of Seafood EMS Resources, the distilled wisdom of the industry leaders who have pioneered seafood environmental management systems in Australia.

The Seafood EMS Resources result from an intensive R&D program made possible by the Australian Government's investment of $1.65 million of Natural Heritage Trust funds through industry partnership programs, including the EMS National Pilot and Pathways to Industry EMS programs. The seafood industry invested $3 million in-kind in these latter two programs.

This R&D capitalised on the innovative strategic investments in environmental management systems in the seafood industry by the Fisheries Research and Development Corporation, with strong support from the Australian seafood industry.

The industry has earned a leading reputation around the world and among other primary industries for these ground-breaking initiatives and its enthusiastic uptake of seafood EMS. By using the Seafood EMS Resources, you're taking advantage of the best EMS experience currently available.

Quotes from the Seafood EMS pilot groups

Northern Territory — barramundi

... better profits ... community confidence in our environmental performance ... more secure resource access ... a wider and deeper support for EMS among us ...

Queensland — Moreton Bay fishers

... more resilient to change now that we understand continual improvement ... better community perceptions from our credible, positive stories ... higher credibility e.g. with conservation groups, because our EMS is based on scientific principles ... stronger relationships between us (UNITY!!) ...

Victoria — Bays and Inlets

... we've changed the political landscape since getting into EMS ... the community recognition we've gained is helping our survival ... the notion has grown that the industry is a valued part of the community ...

Tasmania — oysters

... our staff enjoy their jobs more — much happier ... proven sustainability means the business is more secure ... we're leading by good example in Landcare, local government etc ... EMS links up our QA, QMS, OH&S, management plans and controls, licence conditions and audit processes ... improved capacity to promote all-round quality and respond to market access issues ...

South Australia — southern rocklobster

... EMS gives us a common language to communicate risks and threats and to talk about them in a non-threatening way ... communication channels between skipper and crews are opening up ... training has increased people's awareness of their responsibility ... third-party certification is generating digestible information to show the community ...

Western Australia — pearls

... our participants took control of the agenda and expressed best practice in a form that's gone down well in the wider community ... stakeholders are more aware of the positive steps we're taking in managing risks ... the discipline in preparing cases in some detail has been good for us ... the status of our industry has gone up ...

EMS reminds us that the future is ours to manage

Congratulations to the seafood industry – leaders in environmental management systems!

Five years ago, the notion that the Australian seafood industry would become a world leader in environmental management systems would have been considered far-fetched.

Today, the industry's EMS leadership is widely acknowledged throughout the world and our nation.

This achievement is testament to the inspiration and untiring effort of the staff and directors of Seafood Services Australia Ltd and of the many industry people who have contributed their expertise and time to making EMS work. Prominent among them are the members of the six pilot groups who, by trial and error, showed the way ahead for seafood industry innovators. They have demystified EMSs and have provided easily understood models specifically for the seafood industry.

The seafood industry's achievements have built on longstanding research and development investment in environmental management by the Fisheries Research and Development Corporation. The recent successful outcomes of the six pilot projects were enabled by timely investment by the Australian Government, starting in 2003: some $1.65 million of Natural Heritage Trust funding was allocated through industry partnership programs, including the EMS National Pilot and Pathways to Industry EMS. The seafood industry, in turn, invested $3 million in-kind in these latter two programs.

Through these initiatives, lessons learnt by the seafood industry are being transmitted to other Australian primary industries, further increasing their effectiveness. It is highly satisfying that these collaborations between the Australian Government and industry to enhance the future profitability and sustainability of primary industries have been so successful.

In five years, stimulated by Australian Government initiatives such as the Natural Heritage Trust, there has been a sea-change in attitudes about what is possible in managing the environment. Challenges that seemed insurmountable then can now be met by systematic approaches. Importantly, seafood environmental management systems also allow the industry to demonstrate responsible, sustainable natural resource management. Knowledge of this environmental responsibility is starting to spread throughout the community, with many eventual economic, environmental and social benefits in prospect from increased community confidence in the industry.

This publication, the Seafood EMS Communication Kit, is one of ten paper-based and electronic "Seafood EMS Resources", including an interactive CD-ROM and a website. Its purpose is to help EMS achievements be recognised and supported by the community.

It is with an immense sense of pride that I commend this publication to everyone who has the long-term profitability and sustainability of their seafood business or sector at heart.

The Hon. Sussan Ley, MP
Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry

Tools to help you to do business better — the Seafood EMS Resources

You can't afford to waste time and money when you're running a business. So there's a lot to be said for taking advantage of the experiences of other people.

SSA's Seafood EMS Resources help you to do just that. Thanks to investments by the Fisheries Research and Development Corporation, the seafood industry and the Australian Government's Natural Heritage Trust Pathways to Industry EMS program, you can "pick the brains" of seafood industry people who have pioneered environmental management systems (EMSs) for our industry. We're proud that with their help, we've led the way in EMS — not only among Australian primary industries but world-wide.

We've thoroughly tested and refined all the Seafood EMS Resources so that you can start preparing an EMS — tailored to your unique situation — right now. Here they are:

Choose the right environmental management system

... take a quick read through the Seafood EMS Chooser

Develop your EMS and put it into practice

... follow the Seafood EMS Self-assessment and Training Manual — it also lets you have your skills and knowledge recognised under the National Seafood Industry Training Package

Save time with handy worksheets

... included with the Seafood EMS Self-assessment and Training Manual, the Seafood EMS Worksheets help you to work through each EMS step

Prefer an interactive program?

... then you'll really like the Seafood EMS CD-ROM — it helps you to set goals for the environment, food safety and quality, OH&S, profitability and community relations, and to integrate them into your day-to-day business activities

Be rigorous — get assessed

... the Seafood EMS Assessor's Guide can be used by an EMS Assessor to judge your skills and knowledge against the EMS units of competency in the National Seafood Industry Training Package

Get recognised, get community support

... the Seafood EMS Communication Kit helps your EMS achievements to be recognised and supported by the community

Grab new ideas

... visit the Seafood EMS website — www.seafoodems.com.au — to bring you new EMS resources and ideas

Pick the brains of the trail-blazers

... Seafood EMS Recipes for Success tell you about the experiences of people in the Seafood EMS pilot groups

... and Walking the Talk — Seafood EMS Case Studies gives you more information if you need it

Get together with your stakeholders

Use the Seafood EMS Chooser and the Seafood EMS Self-Assessment and Training Manual together with this 'Compass' to plan your communication activities.

Introduction

Have you ever wished the seafood industry had a better reputation?

This Seafood Communication EMS Kit can help us achieve just that.

Designed to provide you with the 'who, what, when, where, why and how' of communication, this guide uses the eight developmental steps for Seafood Environmental Management Systems (EMS) from the Seafood EMS Chooser to provide a framework for communication activities.

The kit is flexible so that you can decide what type of communication is best suited to your group at different stages of the EMS process.

Different groups will have people with varying levels of skill and experience in relation to event organisation, working with the media and communication in general. This means you need to assess the experience your group has with communication as soon as you start the process. Based on this assessment, you may decide to undergo some basic training (for example - learning how to work with the media).

This 'Communication Compass' is designed to be used in conjunction with the accompanying Media Guide, Communication Tip Sheets and Resources (there are electronic copies of these templates on the Seafood EMS website, www.seafood.net.au/ems).

Good luck!

“Often the people we avoid dealing with are the ones we most need to communicate with.”

1. Vision

How to communicate when you are creating a vision

STEP

ORGANISE A MEETING or workshop with aquaculturists/fishers to discuss the possibility of doing an EMS. This can be as informal as you want – the venue could even be your house. Note: the term ‘fisher’ is used interchangeably with ‘aquaculturist/farmer’ throughout.

See Resource 5 for a letter of invitation and Tip sheet 7 on holding a meeting

STEP

TELL OTHER FISHERS/AQUACULTURISTS WHAT AN EMS IS and what it can do for them.

Once you have decided to develop an EMS you will need to form a network of fishers who understand and are interested in your EMS. To do this you need to start communicating about EMS with your fellow industry members. You can distribute fact sheets at the farm headquarters, wharves, co-ops, on boats, at social functions or at industry/association meetings. You can also communicate through word of mouth as you see people or on the phone.

Photocopy and distribute the EMS Fact sheets provided in Resource 1

See Tip sheet 8 on setting up networks

STEP

START A CONTACT DATABASE or list of fishers/farmers who are interested in EMS

This will help you to keep a track of who is involved in your EMS and will make communication with them easy. At this stage this will include those who attend the first meeting and/or those who express an interest in being involved.

Use the example database/contact list (there are electronic copies of these templates on the Seafood EMS website, www.seafood.net.au/ems) at your meetings and enter these details onto a computer. You can print this out and distribute copies to your group. All groups such as media, conservation, government and even recreational fishing use the internet.

STEP

IDENTIFY INDUSTRY LEADERS AND ESTABLISH A WORKING GROUP

You will need to identify approximately three to six leaders per industry or group.

These people will become your EMS working group who will develop the EMS and be responsible for communicating with other fishers and non-industry groups.

See Tip sheet 9 on identifying industry leaders

STEP

MAKE CONTACT with your local and state-based seafood associations to let them know that you are starting an EMS. You may phone them or arrange a meeting. Use this opportunity to find out if you can provide regular updates on your EMS progress in their newsletter or magazine. (This will help you to communicate not only with members, but also with the wider seafood industry. It may be a useful tool to let non-industry groups know what stage the project is at and when they can be involved.)

See Resources 2 & 10 for a contact list template and industry contact lists

STEP*6

CREATE A NEWSLETTER (if your organisation does not already have one) to communicate with industry members about your EMS.

At this stage your newsletter may be as simple as a one- or two-page document informing industry members that you have commenced development of an EMS. It will also provide a summary of the decisions made or outcomes from your first EMS meeting, in addition to contact details for your group. You might report on how many people attended and plans for continued development. This will be something that you will produce regularly.

See Resource 3 for a sample newsletter

See Tip sheet 10 for using photos

STEP*7

ACCESS A DIGITAL CAMERA (if you do not already have one) to photograph the people who attend your EMS meetings. Documenting the EMS process in this way is an important communication tool. Consider purchasing a digital camera if necessary. This is an invaluable investment as you can use these photos in your newsletters, to send in with articles to magazines and to use in promotional material for your businesses. The earlier you start taking photographs, the better.

See Tip sheets 10 & 11 for using photos and where to find images

STEP*8

USE THE INTERNET (if you do not already have access)

If you have never used the internet before, it may seem scary. However this will be an essential tool to use in organising meetings and contacting people.

It is essential that you get an email address set up and check it regularly.

See Tip sheet 15 on using the internet and emailing

SHOULD I BE COMMUNICATING WITH GROUPS OUTSIDE OF THE SEAFOOD INDUSTRY AT THIS STAGE?

At this stage you do not need to communicate with external stakeholders or non-industry groups. This is because you are still organising who is responsible for communication and how to communicate. In addition, you need to set up a basic EMS structure (vision and scope) before you communicate with the media or non-industry people.

2. Scope

How to communicate when setting your scope

According to the Seafood EMS Self-assessment and Training Manual, by now you will have:

- Established a vision and be in the process of setting your scope;
- Identified and committed industry leaders; and
- Committed a small group to EMS development.

REGULAR MEETINGS will be a key part of your communication from now on. This will allow your EMS working group to maintain contact and share ideas. These meetings will also be used to develop the EMS itself.

See Resources 6 & 7 for a sample agenda and PowerPoint presentations

UPDATE AND MAINTAIN CONTACTS DATABASE

It is important that you continue to update your contact list/database with the names and contact details of any new members to your group. Keep in mind that more people may become interested in joining your group as you progress – especially if you are communicating well!!

CONTINUE CONTACT with local/state associations.

DISTRIBUTE ANOTHER ISSUE OF YOUR NEWSLETTER to update your group members on the progress of your EMS and any outcomes. You might like to include an update on your progress with the vision and scope.

ARRANGE TRAINING EARLY in the EMS development process for industry leaders. This training should provide them with the skills and confidence they will need to communicate, not only with other fishers/farmers, but also with the media. This training, for example, could be in public speaking, basic communication skills, basic computer skills and/or working with the media.

Contact your nearest Registered Training Organisation (eg. TAFE), SSA or your local/state industry association for information on subsidising the costs of training and information on industry training events.

See Resource 10 for a list of key industry associations and Registered Training Organisations (RTOs)

STEP
6*CONTACTING THE MEDIA

Now that you have developed your vision and scope, you have a good starting point for developing the key messages that you will communicate throughout the EMS process. Make sure you contact your local or state seafood industry association and refer to Section 4 of the Media Guide to help you develop your key messages.

Talking to the media before you are clear on your messages can do more harm than good!

It is up to you whether you contact the media at this stage of the EMS process or later on. If you feel confident and are clear about the messages you want to communicate, then you are ready to start!!

You may decide to put out a media release at this stage or even just arrange to have a coffee with your local journalist. Your good news is that your group is:

- Commencing development of an EMS; and
- Making a formal commitment to achieve environmental sustainability through an EMS.

See the Media Guide Tip sheets (1-6) and Resource 11 for directions on how to write and send a media release, how to prepare for an interview, who to contact and how to work with the media in general.

Remember the KISS principle – keep it simple, stupid!

3.

Risk Assessment

How to communicate when conducting your risk assessment

According to the Seafood EMS Self Assessment and Training Manual, by now you will have:

- Established a vision and scope;
- Industry leaders identified and committed;
- A small group committed to EMS development; and
- Risk assessment commenced.

REGULAR MEETINGS will be a key part of your communication. This will allow your EMS working group to maintain contact and share ideas. These meetings will also be used to develop the EMS itself. At this stage of the process, these meetings may be workshops.

See Tip sheet 12 on how to conduct workshops

UPDATE AND MAINTAIN CONTACTS DATABASE

It is important that you continue to update your contact list/database with the names and contact details of any new members to your group. Keep in mind that more people may become interested in joining your group as you progress – especially if you are communicating well!

CONTINUE CONTACT with local/state associations.

DISTRIBUTE ANOTHER ISSUE OF YOUR NEWSLETTER to update your group members on the progress of your EMS and any outcomes. For example, at this stage you might include your risk assessment tables (see the SSA Seafood EMS Self Assessment and Training Manual for instructions on doing a risk assessment).

ENGAGE OR TALK TO A MENTOR – maintaining strong communication with fishers/farmers about EMS is crucial. Engaging someone (a mentor) who has already done an EMS to talk to your group will be a great way of maintaining momentum with your EMS and enthusiasm. This may also equip them with the confidence to communicate more broadly with others in their region or fishery/operation. You may also consider sending a small group to another farm/fishery, region or state to learn from other groups.

See Resource 4 on mentoring and contact SSA on 1300 130 321 for more information

4. Policy & Management

▶ How to communicate when establishing your policy

REGULAR MEETINGS will be a key part of your communication. This will allow your EMS working group to maintain contact and share ideas. These meetings will also be used to develop the EMS itself. This is likely to be a sector, industry or regional workshop.

UPDATE AND MAINTAIN CONTACTS DATABASE

It is important that you continue to update your contact list/database with the names and contact details of any new members to your group. Keep in mind that more people may become interested in joining your group as you progress – especially if you are communicating well!

CONTINUE CONTACT with local/state associations.

DISTRIBUTE ANOTHER ISSUE OF YOUR NEWSLETTER to update your group members on the progress of your EMS and any outcomes. In this edition you might like to include a profile of your members and/or an overview of your policy and management.

5. Action Plan

How to communicate when developing your action plan

STEP 1

REGULAR MEETINGS will be a key part of your communication. This will allow your EMS working group to maintain contact and share ideas. These meetings will also be used to develop the EMS itself. A good way of communicating with fishers/farmers about the development of your action plan would be to hold a sector, industry or regional workshop.

STEP 2

UPDATE AND MAINTAIN CONTACTS DATABASE

That's right...time to update your contacts database again!!

It is important that you continue to update your contact list/database with the names and contact details of any new members to your group. Keep in mind that more people may become interested in joining your group as you progress – especially if you are communicating well!!

STEP 3

CONTINUE CONTACT with local/state associations.

STEP 4

DISTRIBUTE ANOTHER ISSUE OF YOUR NEWSLETTER to update your group members on the progress of your EMS and any outcomes. Now is the time to engage the wider industry (distribute your newsletter to more people). Send this newsletter out to your whole industry in your region or nationally if appropriate (eg. Barramundi aquaculture). Letting people know that you have an EMS Action Plan is likely to generate discussion – expect a few calls!

STEP 5

FAMILIARISE YOURSELF WITH THE MEDIA GUIDE and start to think about how your group might try to engage the media if you haven't already. Make some preliminary calls to some of your local journalists and let them know what your group is doing. The next section over the page (Implementation) will help you progress this kind of communication planning further. Let your local, state or national industry body or SSA know that you are thinking of engaging the media. Take a journalist for a coffee so you can get to know each other and discuss the story.

STEP 6

DEVELOP A SIMPLE BROCHURE – now is a good time to start communicating with the wider public (if you have not already started). Developing a brochure that tells people about your sector and your commitment to EMS is a valuable tool. You can distribute these in local fish and chip shops, seafood restaurants, bait and tackle shops and elsewhere (such as inserts in newsletters and industry magazines or in the glove box of your car to hand out to interested people).

See Tip sheet 13 on how to produce newsletters and fact sheets

See Tip sheet 22 on promotion & distribution

See Resources 8 & 9 for an example brochure and fact sheet outline

6. Implementation

How to communicate when you are at the implementation stage

According to the SSA Seafood EMS Self-assessment and Training Manual, by now you should have developed your EMS documentation and have strategies in place to manage identified risks.

Now is the time to start formally communicating with non-industry groups. A key part of this communication will be getting feedback from various groups on your draft EMS document.

GETTING FEEDBACK from industry, non-industry groups and the broader community is essential, once you have completed the draft EMS plan.

See Tip sheet 17 & 18 on getting feedback, open days and other events

Once you have finalised your draft and incorporated any feedback into the EMS document, you have a finished product that is ready to be promoted.

Now is a good time to engage the media. Your good news is that your group has:

- Developed an EMS and are involving the local community;
- Is making a formal commitment to achieve environmental sustainability through an EMS.

Use the Media Guide along with your vision to help agree on your key messages

ORGANISE A MEDIA LAUNCH for your completed EMS plan.

See Section 8 of the Media Guide on how to invite the media to an event

See Resource 11 for a media contact list

See Tip sheet 14 on giving presentations and talks

See Resource 7 for example PowerPoint presentations (there are electronic copies of these templates on the Seafood EMS website, www.seafood.net.au/ems)

To engage the media you may choose any one of a number of activities.

See Tip sheet 6 for advice on how to organise a media launch on a budget.

SEND OUT A MEDIA RELEASE

See Section 6 of the Media Guide for instructions on how to write a media release

See Tip sheet 2 for a media release example

See Section 9 of the Media Guide on how to send a media release

STEP

INTERVIEWS AND THE MEDIA – following your media launch and/or your media release, your group will need to be prepared to work with the media.

See Sections 1, 2, 5, 10 and 11 of the Media Guide for working with the media

See Tip sheet 5 for a media kit template to send or hand out to journalists

STEP

MEDIA TRAINING – You may want to consider getting media training for your key industry/group leaders prior to a media launch (if you have not done so already). This will help equip them with the necessary skills to communicate effectively with the media. Contact your local industry body or SSA to enquire about media training options. Also see Resource 10 for a list of Registered Training Organisation (RTO) contacts.

STEP

CONTINUE CONTACT WITH YOUR EMS GROUP – even though you have finished developing your EMS documentation, it is critical that you continue communicating within your EMS group. Organising the launch together is essential. Give everyone a role in its organisation.

STEP

UPDATE AND MAINTAIN CONTACTS DATABASE

It is important that you continue to update your contact list/database with the names and contact details of any new members to your group.

Keep in mind that more people may become interested in joining your group as you progress – especially if you are communicating well!!

STEP

CONTINUE CONTACT with local/state associations and put notifications of your launch in industry magazines/newsletters. Make sure you invite these people to the launch.

STEP

DISTRIBUTE ANOTHER ISSUE OF YOUR NEWSLETTER to update your group members on the progress of your EMS and to notify them of your launch, providing them with information on how they can be involved in the organisation. Encourage them to invite people and to spread the word.

STEP

DISTRIBUTE YOUR EMS BROCHURE – distribute your EMS brochure at the launch. It is a great communication tool.

7. Audit Certification & Review

How to communicate when doing your audit certification and review

According to the Seafood EMS Self-assessment and Training Manual, at this stage your group should be planning to have a review of your progress.

At this point in the process, communication is still very important.

By now your industry leaders will have developed more confidence when it comes to communicating.

COMMUNICATE WITH AUDITORS

It is imperative that your industry leaders communicate with the auditors about what they want to achieve through being audited.

This will include communicating the audit scope, criteria, schedule and other relevant information to the auditors, prior to the audit.

This will help to avoid confusion and facilitate the audit process.

COMMUNICATE INTERNALLY

It is important to communicate the audit process to your own employees, partners and stakeholders. Hold a meeting, put up a notice or send a letter to each key person to explain the process.

COMMUNICATE WITH OTHERS

Consider a media release or another newsletter to inform your contacts about the audit outcomes.

How to communicate when you are in the final stages of your EMS

Reporting EMS outcomes is critical to being able to demonstrate your environmental credentials to customers, governments and the community.

In the process of developing your EMS, you created and gathered positive information about your industry. Now is the opportunity to use this information in easy-to-understand forms that are suitable for a range of 'good news stories'.

You may consider doing things such as:

- Organising workshops or events

See Tip sheet 12 on conducting workshops

- Speaking at functions or seafood festivals

See Tip sheet 14 on giving presentations and talks

- Designing and printing brochures

See Resources 8 & 9 for example brochure and fact sheet templates

- Promoting seafood education

See Tip sheets 19 & 22 on seafood education and promotion

- Developing a website

See Tip sheets 15 & 16 on using the internet, emailing and how to develop a website

- Gaining sponsorship and funding

See Tip sheet 20 on gaining sponsorship and funding

- Lobbying

See Tip sheet 21 on lobbying and communicating with politicians

Now that you have developed a good network and profile for your group – maintain it! Keep up the momentum by looking for ways to continue some of your activities such as the newsletter and meetings.

Good luck!

Seafood EMS Media Guide

1. WHY USE THE MEDIA?

Few political decisions are progressed without pressure applied through the media.

Newspapers, magazines, radio and television are practical and effective ways to reach a wide audience with important messages about the seafood industry. Today's media have great influence in shaping public views and opinions. Your job is to provide the media with newsworthy information that they can turn into a story.

This guide is designed to help you to get to know the media so that you can work with journalists to help achieve your goals.

WHY USE THE MEDIA?

2. WHAT ARE THE DIFFERENT NEWS FORMATS?

Different media outlets are tailored to different types of 'news' (eg. The Australian newspaper will comment on political decisions while Woman's Day is more likely to run a story on the Prime Minister's kitchen). Both formats help shape public opinion and should therefore be considered.

Journalists will often cover specific topics (For example: politics, environment, fishing, food, etc.), so phone or check out the website of the outlet you are targeting and find out who the relevant journalist is. Think about what media you read or listen to. Use your judgement to assess which option is the best fit for your story.

NEWSPAPERS

The print media is best for delivering more detailed information. The message can be read repeatedly and kept for reference. The scope and level of 'importance' of your news will determine if it will be of interest to a city, regional or local newspaper (or all three).

- Metropolitan (or city) newspapers come out daily and therefore work with short deadlines. They usually deal with issues of state, national, or international significance. It is critical that you have the capacity to answer their questions immediately. Contact the relevant chief-of-staff, journalist or editor.
- Regional newspapers can come out daily, weekly, or multi-weekly and report issues of local significance, especially rural matters. Again contact the relevant journalist or editor.
- Suburban (or local) newspapers are generally weekly or bi-weekly and therefore run on longer lead times. They release stories of local importance, especially local council, environmental, planning and 'people' or human-interest stories. Contact the relevant journalist or editor.

MAGAZINES

Magazines are usually released weekly, monthly or quarterly and have more specific target markets. They are more likely to deal with a topic in depth and have more capacity for 'timeless' stories. You will often have more time to prepare these stories. Trade magazines will concentrate on industry news. General magazines will be more likely to cover colourful stories (like a local 'personality'). Again, when you are prepared, contact the relevant journalist or editor.

RADIO

Radio can generally be broken into 'news' and talk-back.

- Radio news is generally broadcast every half-hour and runs for around five minutes. Radio relies on a number of short, sharp 'bites' of interesting information. Remember that your five minute interview can often be edited down to five seconds. Once you have drafted your media statement, contact the relevant announcer or news desk.
- Talk-back is excellent for generating discussion. You usually have far more time to make your point and are rarely edited. The talk-back format is often based on a general theme or issue for the day so wait until the right issue comes along and add your voice into the mix!

TELEVISION

Television relies on high visual impact, drama and entertainment. Television news reports work with very tight deadlines covering significant issues, with clips lasting anywhere from 30 to 60 seconds. News broadcasts often end with a light-hearted, 'people' story to leave the viewers on a positive note. Current affairs programs seek drama so rely on issues that involve conflict with two 'opposing' spokespeople.

2 WHAT ARE THE DIFFERENT NEWS FORMATS?

3. WHAT IS NEWSWORTHY?

Not all information is interesting to the public. Journalists have to publish stories that they think will appeal to the most people. You can generate your own news or comment on current issues – seek advice from your local industry group. Your story should be tailored to the right format (eg. radio), focused on your target audience (eg. local community) and have one or more of the following ingredients to make it newsworthy:

Immediacy Did the news just happen? For example: Political announcement; a boat sinking; or launching a new trawler.

Prominence Is the person or issue well known? Often prominent people are used as spokespeople for organisations. For example: An international company is trialling your commercial fishing equipment or using a film star to promote an environmental cause.

Proximity Is it a local issue? Something that happens locally is generally more interesting than the same news on the other side of the world. For example: Local fishery wins an award; Whale caught in local shark nets.

Significance Does the story matter to the audience? Are they affected by the news? For example: Local fishers concerned about industrial pollution of a local waterway.

Unusualness Is the news different? Has it ever happened before? For example: Prehistoric fish caught in deep sea catch.

Human Interest Can the audience identify with the story? For example: A woman wins a year's supply of seafood.

Conflict Is it controversial? Are people divided on the issue? For example: Japan is looking to start whaling again – while this is not an issue you may be involved with, it is a topic you may be able to comment on.

3. WHAT IS NEWSWORTHY?

Information that is 'newsworthy' doesn't always make 'the news'

What makes 'the news' depends on how interesting the journalist (or their editor) thinks your information is. Your local and regional journalists will be looking for interesting angles. When it comes to promoting your Environmental Management System (EMS), this topic by itself may not be newsworthy enough to get the sort of coverage you want. Try linking your EMS to one of the angles listed below to get journalists interested, without focusing totally on the EMS itself. Always remember that journalists don't know what an EMS is, so always spell it out with the shortened version in brackets afterwards (EMS). You might like to base your media release on one of the following:

- Cleaning up the waterways;
- Significant improvement in environmental performance;
- New technology or product;
- Major event or open day;
- New record;
- Award for best practice;
- If you have provided help in an emergency;
- When your company reaches a milestone (For example: 25 years in business); or
- Politician's comments on your business or sector (Note: comments must be new).

3 WHAT IS NEWSWORTHY?

4. WHAT ARE KEY MESSAGES?

Key messages are messages you want your audience to remember and react to. Key messages are opinions that you can back up with proof and case examples. Your key message should feature prominently in your media release and be incorporated into a 'quotable quote' for radio or TV audiences.

Key messages are often tailored to address each issue and the target audience. Leading seafood organisations are currently aiming to improve collaboration within the industry and consistency in approach so a number of core key messages have been developed for use where possible.

Key messages are:

- Concise Explain that an EMS is the guide to sustainability. Avoid jargon and acronyms. For example: "Environmental Management Systems", rather than, "EMS".
- Active Make every sentence active. For example: "Local crew launches world-class trawler", rather than, "A world-class trawler was launched by us".
- Positive Talk about what can be done, not what can't. For example: "We're changing the way we trawl to minimise bycatch", rather than, "Our nets currently catch a lot of other species that we don't actually want".
- Short One memorable sentence that takes about three to five seconds to say. For example: "Sustainable fishing is our future".
- Specific Address a particular challenge and audience. For example: "Seafood can reduce the health problems of people with diabetes and arthritis", rather than, "Seafood has health benefits".

4 WHAT ARE KEY MESSAGES?

MORE ►►►

4. WHAT ARE KEY MESSAGES?

A key message is the main point or 'take-home message' you want your audience to remember. The same two or three key messages should be written into all of your resources (newsletters, media releases, posters, pamphlets and presentations).

While it can be good to localise your key message/s, the entire seafood industry will benefit if the same messages are used by everyone. This will make it more likely that your key messages are remembered.

Three recommended key messages are:

1. Aquaculturists (or insert fishers, pearling or oyster farmers, etc.) are protecting Australia's waterways;
2. Australian seafood businesses are focused on the environment; and
3. Sustainable oyster farming (or insert your appropriate sector) means high quality Australian seafood will always be available.

* Note: contact your professional body or SSA on 1300 130 321 for assistance

4 WHAT ARE KEY MESSAGES?

5. HOW DOES NEWS WORK?

News is usually classified as either 'hard' or 'soft'.

Hard news writes itself. Examples would be strikes, fires, accidents, scandals, or anything sudden or dramatic.

Soft news is news that is not essential but provides human interest and variety. An example is the final story following the weather forecast on most TV news broadcasts.

When an event arises that is newsworthy there are two ways to deal with the media. You can either be reactive or proactive. In a lot of cases, you need to use a reactive approach for hard news and a proactive model for soft news. Contact your local industry body to decide the best approach.

Reactive: Waiting until after news breaks to make a comment or speak to the media.

Proactive: Anticipating the media interest by initiating media coverage and actively working with journalists to present the news in the way you want.

When you have to be reactive, there are ways to deal with the situation which help to reduce potential damage.

- Always use your key messages as a baseline for all comments and keep repeating them;
- Designate spokespeople to focus on certain areas of your business so that the media does not receive mixed messages; and
- Use your local support to help in dealing with an enquiry. (See Resource 10 for the name of your local professional aquaculture/fishing organisation).

It is easier to promote a business or industry with a proactive approach. When an event or issue arises, consult with your local support organisation and tell the media so that the information is presented the way you want. There are a number of ways you can be proactive – write a media release, letter to the editor or invite the media to an event.

See Tip Sheet 1 - Proactive/Reactive

6. HOW DO I WRITE A MEDIA RELEASE?

See Tip Sheet 2 for example media releases

Each story needs to be tailored to your target audience. For example: a story targeting children will be written differently to one targeting politicians or the wider community. Keep your target audience in mind and include your key messages when drafting your media release.

A media release is the most common way to present news to the media. It is usually a one-page document that answers the “who/what/when/where/ and why” (five Ws) “and how” of an issue or event. Media releases keep you in front of the media and can be a good way to publicise your company or business. You can use a release any time you have new information, or a product or event to share.

Remember that you will need to tailor your statement to your preferred media (eg. radio, newspaper, TV) and perhaps even further refine it to suit the style of the medium (ie. articles in The Australian are written differently to those in your local paper). A good tip to remember is the ‘three-second rule’. Imagine you have only three seconds to grab the journalist/ editor’s attention when they pick up your release. Therefore, you will need an interesting and informative heading and a strong lead sentence.

The media release should act as a funnel to draw the journalist/reader in. The following diagram illustrates how you should organise your information to focus attention:

6 HOW DO I WRITE A MEDIA RELEASE?

MORE ►►►

6. HOW DO I WRITE A MEDIA RELEASE?

Format of a media release: Remember you are writing for the audience, not the journalist.

Who it's from

Clearly state name and contact numbers (including after hours).

What is it?

State what is being sent. For example "Media release, for immediate release".

Date

The release should be dated for the day it lands on the journalist's desk.

Headline

Make the title short and catchy to grab the journalist's attention.

Length

The release should be no longer than two pages, preferably one. Line spacing should be 1.5 or double-spaced. Keep paragraphs to no longer than three sentences. Keep sentences short – no more than 25 words.

Opening paragraph

The opening paragraph should summarise the story. It should be no longer than 50 words and include the five Ws.

Style

The general style should be short and jargon-free. Avoid acronyms or spell them out the first time. For example: Seafood Services Australia (SSA). Remember that your audience may not know much about the topic.

Quotes

Use quotes to add personality to your story. A quote should support your message but not just restate it. Do not use more than two spokespeople in one article.

Facts and figures

Use facts and figures to support your information.

Continuation

If the release continues to the next page, include the words "more" at the bottom of the first page.

Contact details

Always state contact details, including name, phone number, email and website, at the top or bottom of every page.

Notes to editor

Describe any photographs or further resources that are available.

Editing

Check your release for unnecessary words, spelling and grammatical errors, contradictions and accurate facts.

Remember – always keep it simple, stupid! (KISS)

See Tip Sheet 2 - Media Release Example

HOW DO I WRITE A MEDIA RELEASE?

6. HOW DO I WRITE A MEDIA RELEASE?

Submit the release to the media outlets of your choice and follow up with a phone call. When following up, never hassle the journalist by asking questions such as when your story will be published. Introduce yourself, notify them that you have sent a release, ask them if they require any further information and offer photos if available. Comprehensive media lists are available from Seafood Services Australia.

See Resource 10 - Industry Contact List for a basic list but always remember to check the details as they may have changed since the list was printed.

Don't be offended if your story is not published. Journalists receive hundreds of releases each week.

Photos:

A story's 'newsworthiness' can increase if you offer a good picture or photo opportunity. You can trigger an editor or reporter's interest in your story and increase your chances of having it published.

Remember:

- Photos need to be of professional quality. For electronic images, this means they need to be supplied in high resolution. Image resolution is measured in Dots Per Inch (DPI). The minimum resolution for photo journalism is 300 DPI. A 3-megapixel digital camera can generally supply images of suitable quality;
- Permission from the photographer is required;
- If supplied as a hard copy, always label the back of the photo;
- Photos are rarely returned.

6 HOW DO I WRITE A MEDIA RELEASE?

7. HOW DO I WRITE A LETTER TO THE EDITOR?

The letters to the editor page is an effective way to raise awareness about an issue or provide a different opinion.

The letter should express your key message and opinion about the subject matter and provide enough information for readers to understand the issue.

Who it's from State your name and contact details (include your organisation name and credentials if applicable).

What is it? Clearly state what is being sent. For example: "Letter to the editor".

Date The letter should be dated for the day it lands on the editor's desk.

Length You will need to keep your letter extremely brief (usually between 50 and 300 words). Remember to focus on the key issue and reinforce your opinion with concise facts.

Send your letter to the editor while the issue is still current. Follow up with a phone call to make sure they received your letter and to answer any questions. Never hassle the editor.

See Tip Sheet 3 - Letter To The Editor Example

8. HOW DO I INVITE MEDIA TO AN EVENT?

The media are more likely to attend a launch or event if it includes newsworthy ingredients. It could involve trawler crews with catch, well-known personalities, give-aways, large crowds or good visual images. For example: Fishers cleaning up the waterways; Celebrity swimming with the dolphins; or World's longest fish finger.

Before the event:

- If you have a journalist or editor you have worked with before, phone them to let them know about the event. Advise the media by sending them a media advisory one or two weeks in advance.
- See Tip Sheet 4 - Media Advisory Example A media advisory includes a few paragraphs about the event plus details of time, date and venue. Explain the purpose of the event to entice the media to attend but don't give away all of the surprises. If they know exactly what is going to happen there is no need for them to attend.
- Call the media outlet and ask the receptionist to put the launch or event in 'The Diary'. Advise the media of a contact person for the event.
- You might want to develop a PowerPoint/visual presentation for the event. (See the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems for PowerPoint presentation templates.)
- On the afternoon before the event, follow up by phone to check that the media have received the advisory and whether they need any more information.

During the event, you will need to make an announcement about the event and give people a brief agenda of proceedings. Introduce yourself to journalists and give them a media kit. A media kit includes a media release, relevant background information and contact details. Reserve a small number of seats at the front for the media (if it is a seated event), and help arrange interviews and questions.

After the event, send media releases to any press that could not attend and ask if they need any more information.

Remember that journalists can receive hundreds of story ideas each week so don't be offended if your story is not published. Still invite them next time!

See Tip Sheet 4 - Media Advisory Example

See Tip Sheet 5 - Media Kit

9. HOW DO I SEND A MEDIA RELEASE?

Contact your industry body or SSA to ask them if they can assist with distribution of the release. There are several ways to send the release, letter or advisory to the media.

You can:

Phone it

If you have breaking news, you may want to be proactive and phone the media outlet to offer news, an interview or let them know that you are available for comment.

Fax it

Aim to address the fax to a specific person by filling in the attention line.

Email it

Be sure to get the reporter's permission the first time you send materials via email. Always include a subject heading. Never send large attachments in emails. Let the journalist know you have photos available but don't clog up their systems. You can include thumbnails of pictures but wait to be asked to send a specific photo.

Put it online

If you have a website, you can publish the release on your site. Send them an email or fax with a few simple dot points about the release. Include contact details and the URL address. Some journalists prefer to 'break the news' so speak with them first if you can.

Organise a distribution service

If you are sending a media release to more than 10 outlets (usually this will be the case), a good option is to pay professionals to distribute it for you. This is fast, convenient and often more economical than attempting to send dozens of faxes from someone's home. For example, you could contact the following media distribution companies through their websites:

www.cannex.com.au

www.aapmedianet.com.au/lists.asp

You will need to tell them which media outlets you want the release sent to. Refer to Resource 11 for a list of media contacts (current 2006).

Contact SSA on 1300 130 321 for advice and support on distribution

Most journalists prefer media releases to be faxed (this can be manual or through an online distribution service). If you want to opt for phoning or emailing, first try to work out how the journalist or editor prefers to receive it. Every journalist is different, some dislike being phoned, others dislike receiving emails from unfamiliar sources. The first time you communicate with a new media person, ask them their preferred method.

10. WHAT WILL JOURNALISTS EXPECT?

When sending information, there are certain expectations from journalists and editors that you need to be aware of. You will need to be:

- Responsive – be available to take calls and/or get back to them straight away (unless you need to plan your response);
- Honest – avoid making too many generalisations or embellishing the truth. Never lie – it will catch up with you once it's on record!
- Accurate – always try to attribute information to a specific person or source. Media personnel will usually seek information that can be endorsed. All speculative statements should be accredited to an individual or company. Facts can be stated if they are sourced correctly.
- Mindful of deadlines – a journalist writing a feature story for a monthly magazine will have more interest in, and time for, details than a daily newspaper journalist. Daily newspapers and television news prefer to receive your media release in the morning. Weekends are usually quiet news times and offer good opportunities for softer stories. Timing is everything – too early and it may be lost in their in tray, too late and you may miss the moment.

Some home truths about dealing with the media (that might save a few disappointments):

- The media is not a charity. It does not have to run your story, listen to you or read your press release. Media outlets receive hundreds of press releases every day and use only a handful. A media outlet is a business just like fishing.
- The media operate on a never-ending series of deadlines. You must meet these to get your point across. Often it is easier to get a story into local media than the metropolitan press where competition for news space is fierce. Do not be too disappointed if your story does not get published. The important thing is to learn from the exercise and wherever possible build relationships with journalists.
- Journalists are under no obligation to show you the story they write before it is published. If journalists showed their stories to people outside their newspaper they would, in effect, be handing over editorial control, an unworkable situation. Build a good relationship with a journalist and they are far more likely to cooperate if you wish to check a story.
- Once your photograph is taken and an interview conducted that material is covered by copyright and belongs to the news organisation which can use it any way it likes, so long as it does not defame you.
- TV reporters usually want 10 to 20 second 'grabs' – in other words a colourful, brief sentence or two summing up your position. Bad luck about all the other important things you said.
- Journalists might ask what appear to be dumb questions but remember they are not fishing industry experts. Journalists (especially from major newspapers) will also ask difficult, confronting questions. It's not personal. That's their job.
- And finally, keep the big picture in mind. It does not matter that not all of your media release was used or that the story ended up with a different 'slant'. Always ask yourself after dealing with the media "did I get the key message across?" If the answer is "yes", then you have used the media to your advantage.

11. WHAT HAPPENS NEXT - HOW TO PLAN FOR AN INTERVIEW?

Make sure you can contact your industry body to be involved with the statement. After you send a media release, letter, or advisory, follow up your submission with a phone call to see if they have received the information and are interested in photographs, an interview, or more information. Never hassle the journalist.

INTERVIEW

It is good practice to let your industry body know that you are planning to be interviewed. Remember that an interview is an opportunity to drive your key messages home. Be familiar with your material, but don't try to memorise it all – otherwise you might sound too monotone and rehearsed!

Before an interview:

- Practise saying your key messages (remember to repeat these as often as possible);
- Find out as much as possible about what is expected of you;
- Think about likely questions and plan answers; and
- Do your homework – prepare briefing notes with your key messages, facts and statistics.

During an interview:

- Relax;
- Smile (even if you are not on camera);
- Do not exaggerate or tell a 'white lie'. If you don't have an answer to a question, tell the journalist you will find out and get straight back to them;
- When asked a question, try to follow the "Key message, Because, Example" format (KBE):
  - K Commercial aquaculture/fishing codes and laws are in place for sustainability;
  - B They ensure growth and reproduction cycles are maintained;
  - E For example, scallop fishing closes for spring and early summer to allow for spawning.
- If you feel you start going off track, repeat your key message and wait for the next question. In a statement like, "Well that's an interesting question but the most important thing to remember is...";
- Where appropriate, talk about what the issue means to 'everyday' people;
- Don't be afraid to let your personality come through;
- Stay calm in the face of outrageous or insulting questioning and make points rationally – repeat your key message; and
- Never go 'off the record'. Never say "No comment". If you don't know the answer to a question, refer the reporter to another person or organisation.

Take part in a media training session to learn skills needed for interviews, hear advice from media professionals, learn how to deal with tricky questioning, and receive feedback on mock interviews. Speak to Seafood Services Australia for information on media training sessions.

Don't worry if your interview isn't published the first time. The fact that they took the time to interview you means they thought it was worthwhile. Sometimes a story, while good, gets bumped for a higher profile one because of time and space issues. Use it as a learning experience and look forward to the next opportunity.

Aquaculture Action Group

September 2008

Bob Drew, Tony Alken & Dan Gully at the Bay Hotel

It has begun! Eight Aquaculturists from The Inlet area got together on Saturday, 22 August to talk about how to progress their Environmental Management System (EMS). After a round of introductions and a short presentation by visiting oyster farmer Coll Dyke who talked about how EMS has not only transformed his business in Tasmania but how the entire industry is booming. The group of eight decided on a name – "Aquaculture Action Group" or AAG. Bob Drew was nominated as Chairperson and Dan Gully agreed to be Secretary and Treasurer.

MENTORS

The definition of a mentor is to serve as a trusted counselor or teacher, especially in occupational settings. People who have developed successful EMSs often attribute their success to the guidance and support they have received from a fellow farmer/fisher who has been through a similar process.

Good mentors will:

- Give their time;
- Share knowledge;
- Be patient, supportive and good communicators;
- Demonstrate 'best practice' and provide constructive feedback; and
- Remain committed for the agreed period.

SUPPORT FOR MENTORS

A number of support programs exist to help build relationships and share knowledge between people involved in the development and/or implementation of a seafood EMS. You can tap into these programs for support to get a mentor to visit your group and tell you about their EMS experiences. Alternatively, it may support a small number of your key industry leaders travelling to another location to learn, first-hand about another fishing group's experience. Mentor support programs vary but will typically fund:

- Out of pocket travel and accommodation expenses (excluding meals) incurred while providing support;
- Assistance to undertake a brief study tour; and/or
- Assistance to attend industry events, workshops or meetings.

Are you worried about the future of your industry?

DATE: Day / Month / Year

Mr Bob Down

Finfish

1 Aussie Drive

Streaky Bay SA 5680

Dear Bob,

Do you want to make sure that your business is viable now and for years to come?

Where: Palms Hotel
Cnr Sandgate & Jubilee Roads, STREAKY BAY

When: Saturday, 19 November
8.30am – 12.30pm

Who: Every professional fisher and deckhand who believes the future of their business and industry is worth fighting for.

What: 1. To discuss the final draft of a plan (written by fishers) to assist the future of Streaky Bay's professional fisheries; and
2. To discuss where to from here and options for working together.

Why: To have your say on an exciting new plan for the future of our professional fisheries and to find out more about the $3000 incentive scheme.

What to bring: Just bring yourself as lunch, tea and coffee will be provided.

You can access a copy of the Streaky Bay EMS on the web at www.seafood.net.au or you can ring Theresa on the number below to get a paper copy mailed. Please find an agenda for the day enclosed.

PowerPoint Presentation Industry EMS Meeting 3

See Resource 9 on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems for a fact sheet template.

A fact sheet gives you exactly that – the facts! Keep the focus positive. Avoid referring to ‘problems’. Rather, refer to them as ‘challenges’ and offer solutions.

Title including location and issue

The title should include the location of the industry and what the issue is. Make it short and descriptive.

Background

Describe what has happened that has led to the issue.

The industry’s position

Describe the industry’s attitude towards the issue.

Who it affects

List those affected if the issue/problem is not resolved. Include as appropriate, the impacts on consumers, farmers/fishers, the local economy and other businesses, and the environment.

What’s being done by the industry

List or describe the actions industry is taking to progress the issue. Make it sound as positive as possible.

Planned outcomes

Describe what you are hoping to achieve. This can be done in bullet points if there is a long list of outcomes.

Who to contact for further information

Give at least two contact names, numbers and emails of people who can provide further information and act as spokespeople for the industry.

* Note: contact your professional body or SSA on 1300 130 321 for assistance

See Resource 10 on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems for an industry contact list you can update and hand out to others.

Many magazines and websites have contact details for aquaculture and commercial fishing organisations. This list is current at the time of printing. Contact your professional fishing body or SSA on 1300 130 321 for updated lists.

Use the following checklist to develop your approach to the media. Local support information, media contact lists and specific information about how to carry out each step is detailed in the Communication Compass.

Write a basic plan

- Who are you targeting (eg. government, local community, other aquaculturists...)?
- What is the issue and your key messages?
- When is the best time to 'go public'?
- Where will you hold your event or be when journalists start to contact you?
- How will you approach the media?
- Why should the journalist (or their audience) be interested?

Designate one or two spokespeople to handle media enquiries

Speak to your industry body to help identify a spokesperson and remember to make all spokespeople familiar with your key messages. Well qualified spokespeople are sought by the media and should understand the issue in detail.

Write a media release, letter to the editor or media advisory/note

See Section 6 of the Media Guide flipchart for instructions on how to write a media release, see Tip Sheet 2 for an example media release and consider producing a Media Kit (see Tip Sheet 5).

Send the draft material to your mentor, professional body or SSA

Obtain feedback and make changes as necessary. See Resource 10 for a list of seafood industry contact details.

Prepare for an interview

See Section 11 of the Media Guide flipchart for help with preparing for an interview.

Distribute the media release, letter or advisory

Sending out a media release does not mean that you have to send out hundreds of faxes manually. Rather, you can pay professionals to distribute it for you through an internet service. For example, you could contact the following media distribution companies through their websites: www.cannex.com.au or www.aapmedianet.com.au/lists.asp. You will need to tell them which media outlets you want the release sent to. Refer to Resource 11 for a list of media contacts (current 2006). Contact SSA on 1300 130 321 for advice and support on distribution.

Call the journalist/s to offer an interview, further information or photos

Don't be offended if they are not interested this time. Try another radio station or newspaper!

What should you do when the media comes to you?

You cannot delay responding to the media if they approach you for an interview. The next day is usually too late. Use the following checklist and refer to Tip Sheet 1: REACTIVE - responding to the media template (there are electronic copies of these templates on the Seafood EMS website, www.seafood.net.au/ems) before you respond to an enquiry or if you see or hear about an issue that affects you.

Gather background information

Find out as much as possible about the story they are working on. Ask the following questions:

What is your name? _____ What media outlet are you from? _____

What is the issue/event? _____

What is the focus of the story? _____

Who else are you talking to? _____

Would you like me to fax/email some background information about the company or topic? Yes / No

When is your deadline? _____ Can I get your contact information?

Phone: _____ Fax: _____ Email: _____

Contact your industry support person

People often undertake training before they work with the media. Don't be afraid to ask your local professional body how to respond to the enquiry. You should discuss your key messages with them. If you do not feel comfortable working with the media, your professional body representative may act as a spokesperson for you on this issue. If you are being asked to provide comment on a serious issue that may negatively impact the future of your whole fishing sector, you may want to consider hiring a public relations (PR) or media professional to speak on your behalf. To find PR consultants near you, look up public relations consultants in your yellow pages.

Designate one or two spokespeople

Your spokespeople will need to be available at short notice to talk with journalists and be familiar with your key message/s. Well qualified spokespeople are sought by the media.

Write a response statement and prepare answers to likely question/s

- Think of the specific audiences you want to reach and prepare key messages;
- Prepare a specific example to support your case, or an analogy that the audience will be able to 'relate to'.

Prepare for an interview

- Prepare two 'quotable quotes' – these should be short sentences incorporating your key message where possible; and
- Practise saying your answers.

* Note: contact your professional body or SSA on 1300 130 321 for assistance

Media releases are usually emailed or faxed to journalists the day before or on the day of an event. Follow this media release example for structure and format:

Organisation logo or letterhead

Contact name:
Contact number:

DATE: Day / Month / Year

For Immediate Release

FISHERS UNITE FOR CLEANER ENVIRONMENT

Twenty local fishers formed a co-op today with the goal of a cleaner environment to make sure seafood supply continues.

➔ INSERT KEY MESSAGE INTO QUOTE HERE - EXAMPLE: "We have banded together because we are serious about protecting our waterways," said Fishing For the Future Co-op founder Mr Joe Horton.

The fishers have been rivals in business for years but are forming a united front for the benefit of Lakes Entrance and the environment.

"We're doing this to ensure that our children can enjoy seafood for years to come," Mr Horton said.

"Right now seafood is treated as a commodity here in Victoria but unless we use environmentally safe practices, the industry won't survive."

The co-op has the backing of Lakes Entrance Tourism who promote the trawlers as one of the main reasons why the region has been such a popular holiday spot for more than 100 years.

"We are researching new trawling techniques to minimise bycatch. Other species that we aren't actually fishing for can sometimes get caught in our nets and we want to minimise that", Mr Horton said.

"The sustainability push comes from the new Environmental Management Systems (EMS) that the industry is driving to help us manage environmental impacts, risks and opportunities," Mr Horton said.

"Seafood Services Australia is helping fishers to adopt sustainable practices and tailor it to suit their individual businesses. The National Heritage Trust is funding a three-year project to build environmentally safe management systems.

"The environmental improvements will be good for Lakes Entrance because it will ensure a healthy supply is maintained for our children and theirs," Mr Horton concluded.

ADDING MORE AQUA “CULTURE”

International seafood industry professionals are descending on Port Stephens today to introduce sophisticated new techniques to local pearl farmers.

➔ INSERT KEY MESSAGE INTO QUOTE HERE - EXAMPLE: “Port Stephens seafood businesses are focused on the environment and this is just another way for us to ensure our products are the best in the world,” said spokesperson for the Oyster Farmers Association (OFA) Bob Atkinson.

“We want to do everything we can to improve our operations to secure the future of the pearling industry here in New South Wales. We are particularly interested in learning the latest oyster seed collection methods to minimise damage.”

The training will take place over two days and involve seminars as well as hands-on training in the water.

“A lot of new methods have come out since we started investigating operations in 1992. We need to catch up with the technology.”

OFA started this process by providing a vision of the future seafood industry and has carried this through with research and policy development. The next stage is to implement the new training methods into daily operations.

The training seminar is part of the environmental management system (EMS) process dedicated to managing environmental impacts, risks and opportunities. Seafood Services Australia is encouraging businesses to adopt an EMS to ensure Australian seafood will always be available.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

October 12

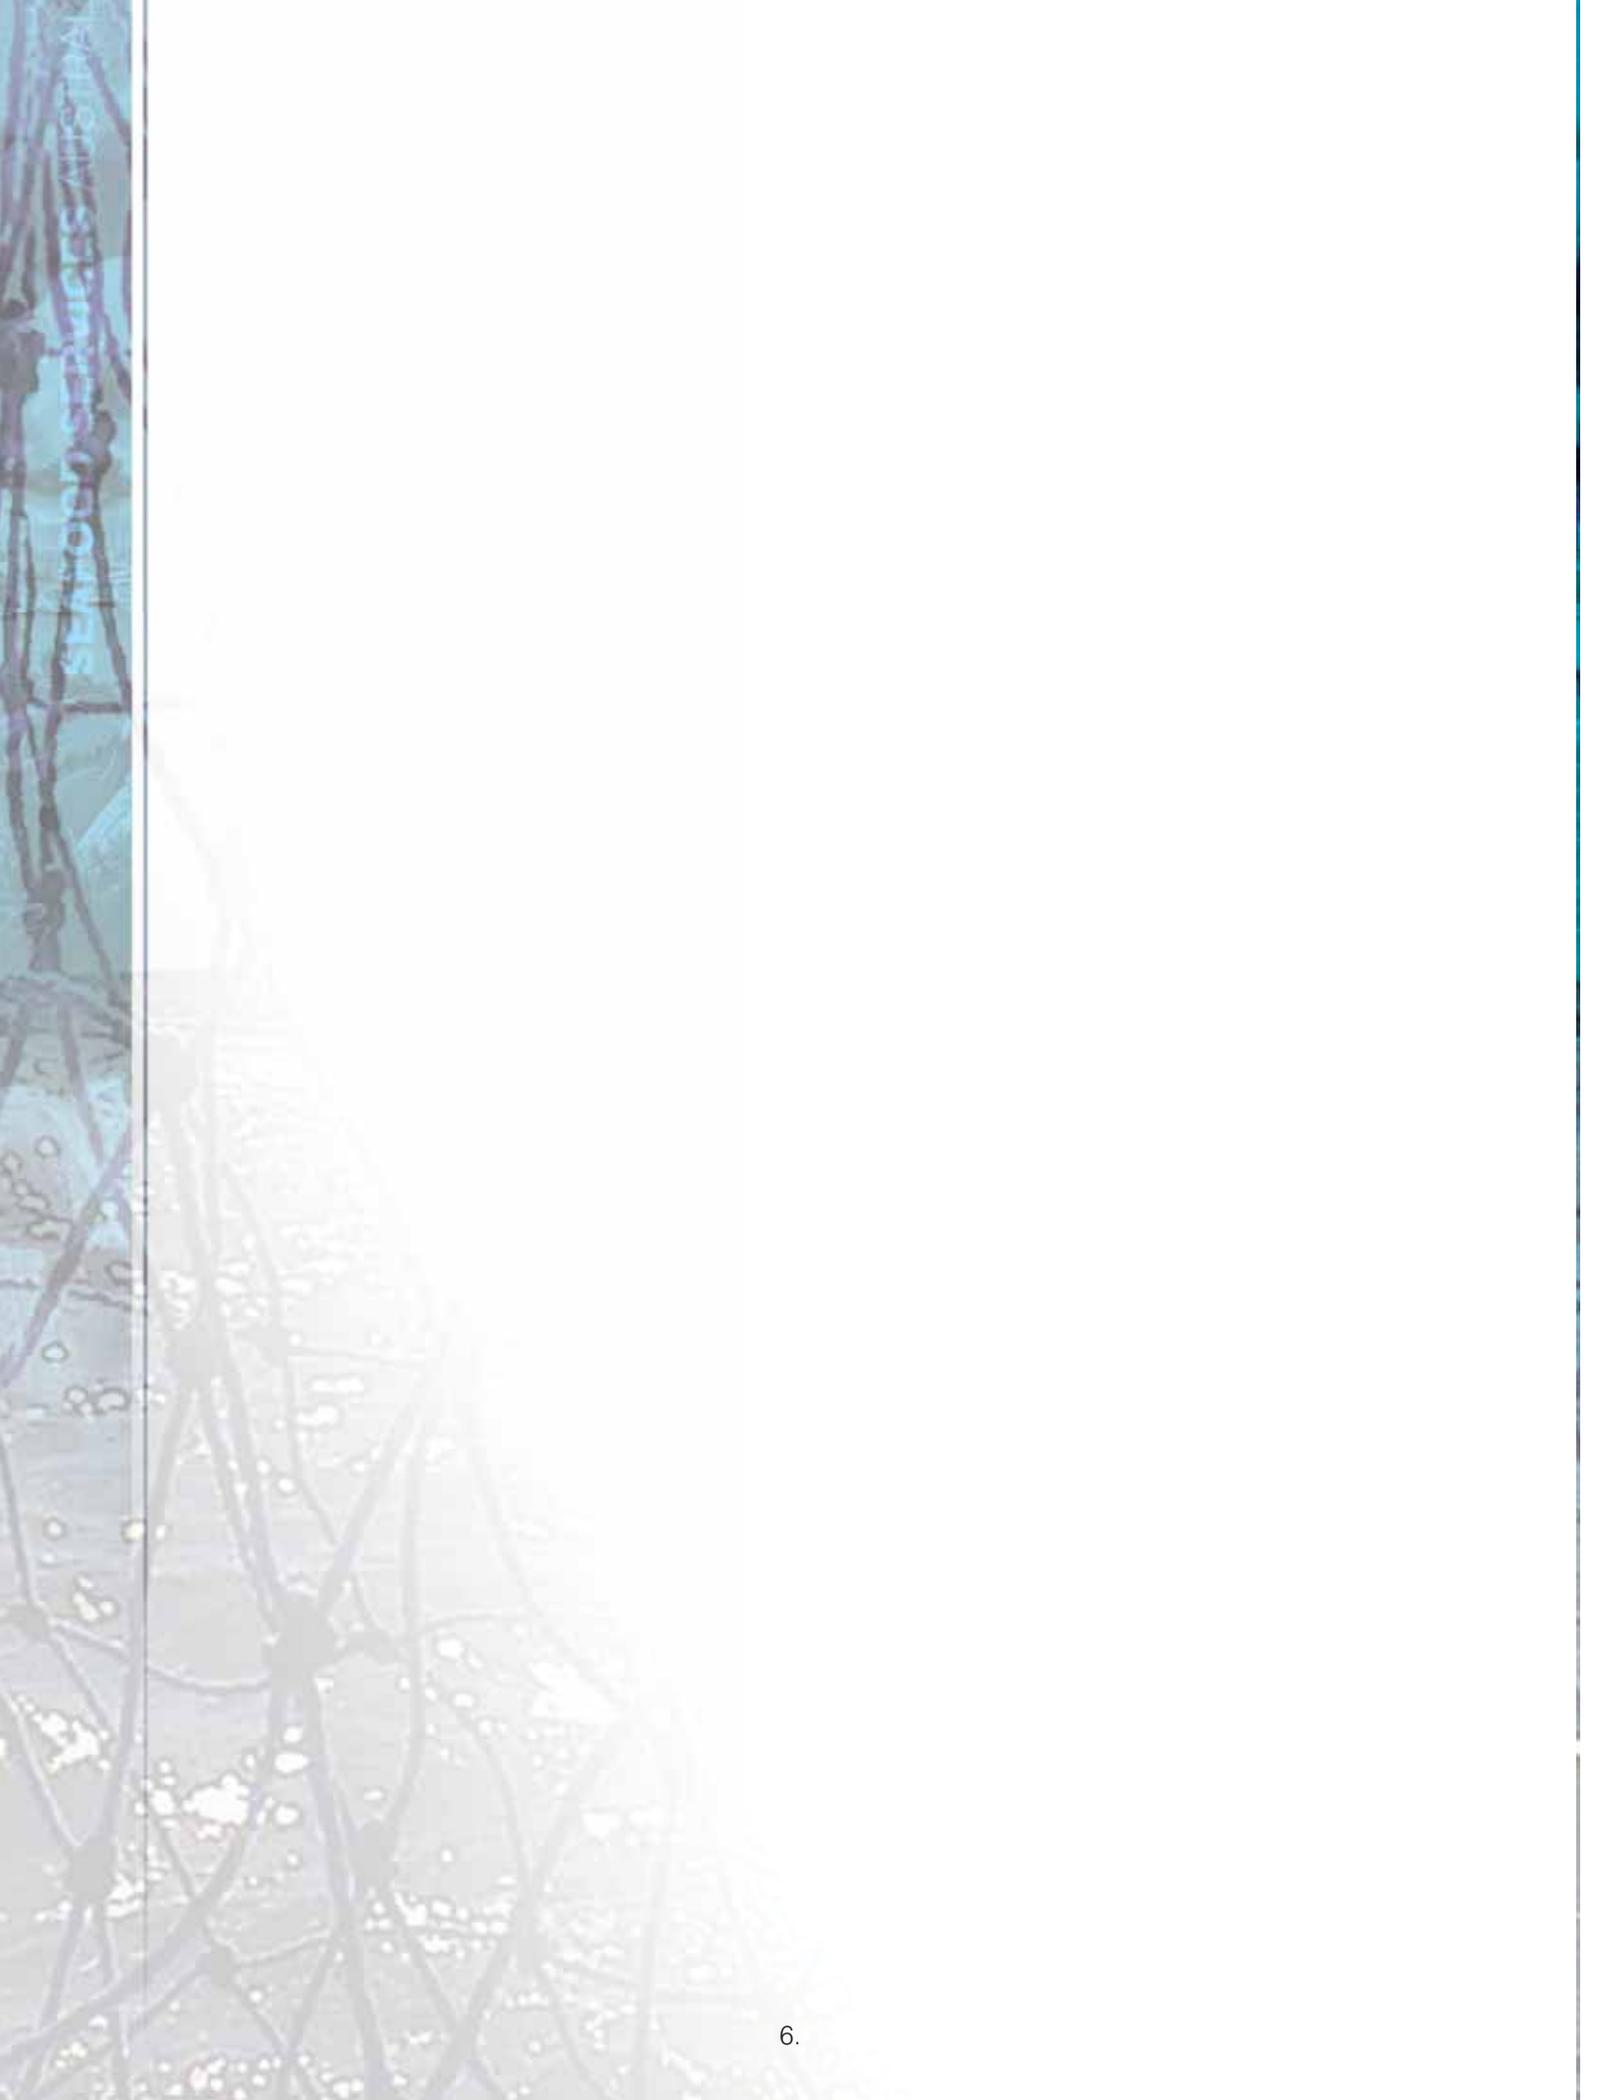

To the Editor,

I strongly disagree with the article, "Fishing is killing our future" (12 Oct, 2006). Despite this speculative article, the fishing industry is going to great lengths to ensure that seafood is sustainable for decades to come. I work as a commercial fisher and am involved in monitoring Australian commercial fishing laws. The current laws restrict fishing of species during spawning and growth periods to ensure their survival. There are also restrictions on the number of species taken from our oceans for the same reason. Much research goes into developing these laws to guarantee that our oceans are sustainable for the future.

Media Kits are used to provide more detailed background information to journalists about your business, industry or issue. Simply fill in the templates (there are electronic copies of these templates on the Seafood EMS website, www.seafood.net.au/ems), check with SSA for the latest industry fact sheets, print out copies of the templates you have filled out (from the website) and slip each copy into a plastic folder with your business card. Give these folders to journalists who attend your event to ensure they have specific corporate information as well as correct industry facts and statistics. You could also mail media kits to local journalists that you want to target.

Use the following checklist to make sure you have included all the details you want to:

- Media release
  - Remember to include contact details for you and your key spokesperson. State on the release if photos or photo opportunities are available.

- Business or organisation fact sheet/s
  - See following page for more detail on what this should include and use the template on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems to make up your own!

- Biography
  - A biography for your key spokesperson/s may help raise their credibility with the media. It also gives radio and TV journalists some background to help introduce them when they are being interviewed.

- Seafood industry fact sheet/s
  - Industry Fact Sheets can be used to provide standard and/or technical information about the seafood industry and your sector in particular (eg. Rock Lobster, Abalone etc.). This is where you may decide to insert more detailed information about EMS.

- Common terms & list of abbreviations
  - Please see the following pages for a current set (2003-04) of industry statistics, common terms and abbreviations. Ensure you have the most recent version as they change regularly and subtle changes can make a big difference! For up to date industry statistics, go to www.abare.gov.au/research/fisheries/fisheries.html

Company, organisation or co-op profile

A business fact sheet lists the basic information about your company or group. Use the following checklist along with the Tip Sheet 5 Media Kit - Business Fact Sheet template (there are electronic copies of these templates on the Seafood EMS website, www.seafood.net.au/ems) to make sure you have included all the details you want to:

Company/group details

- Company/group name;
- Address;
- Phone number;
- Fax;
- Email; and
- Website.

Description of business (or group)

- The species taken/farmed or harvested and their seasonal availability;
- Products and services offered; and
- Markets where your products are sold.

Value of the local industry to your community

- State the number of people working directly in the industry;
- State the Gross Value of Production (GVP) for your industry sector
- The other industries that rely on your catch/harvest or produce in the local, state and national area;
- Any restrictions, problems or regulations placed on your industry;
- Describe what the industry is doing for the environment; and
- List the ways your advisory/business interacts with the local community or supports community events.

Biographies

- Name and job title;
- A brief job description; and
- Qualifications and/or experience (note: academic qualifications not necessary).

Seafood Industry Fact Sheet

ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS (EMS)

As the future of the seafood industry relies on environmental sustainability, Seafood Services Australia (SSA) is promoting the use of EMS to improve and ensure long term availability of our seafood resources.

An EMS may cover:

- an individual business, such as an aquaculture business or fishing vessel
- several businesses with common interests, such as the members of an industry association
- all businesses in a particular fishery or aquaculture sector.

An EMS may be:

- as simple as a code of best practice supported by a clear plan for implementation and compliance, or
- as comprehensive as a third-party certified system complying with international standards such as ISO* 14000 or the Marine Stewardship Council certification scheme.

Key aspects of an EMS are:

- a vision for the future and a clear plan of action for achieving that vision
- capacity in your organisation to implement the action plan and to monitor progress
- capacity to demonstrate continual environmental and other improvements.

SEAFOOD FACTS AND STATISTICS

VALUE & EXPORTS

- Fisheries production is Australia's fourth most valuable food-based primary industry worth approximately $2.2 billion (2003-04). ▶

- Western Australia and South Australia each accounted for around a quarter of Australian production in 2003-04. ◀

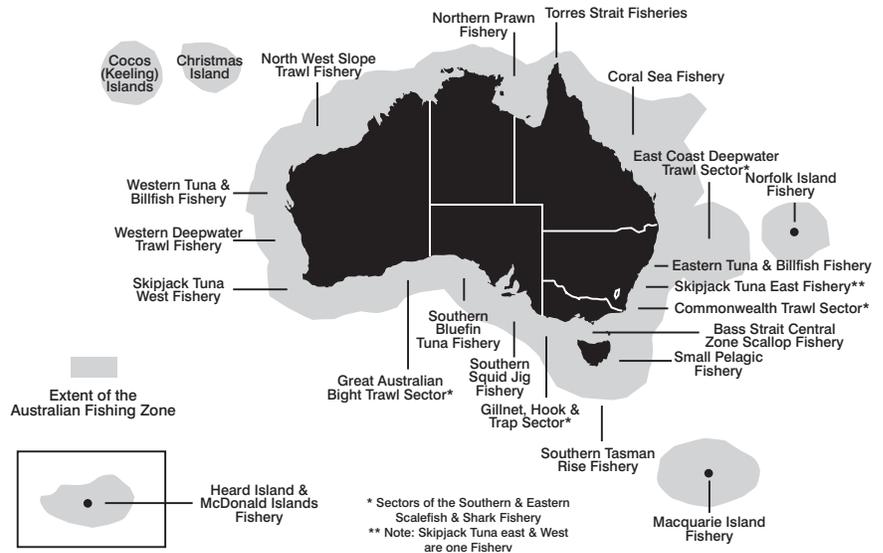

- Australia's total exports of fisheries products in 2003-04 were valued at $1.7 billion. ▶

* ISO is the International Organization for Standardization, which has developed internationally accepted standards for quality management (ISO 9000 series) and environmental management (ISO 14000 series).

AUSTRALIA'S FISHING ZONE

- Australia's fishing zone is the third largest in the world at 11 million square kilometres.
- Even though Australia's zone is quite large, our total commercial catch is only about 0.2 % of world tonnage.

HEALTH

- Research has proven that the omega-3 found in seafood has positive effects for the prevention of coronary heart disease, rheumatoid arthritis, diabetes, obesity and more.
- Seafood is low in fat, kilojoules and cholesterol, and high in protein, vitamins and minerals.

EMPLOYMENT

- The Australian seafood industry provides approximately 120,000 jobs directly and indirectly.

Specific industry careers include:

Aquaculturist	Farms seafood in controlled environments. Operations can be marine or land-based.
Fisher	Uses a variety of techniques and equipment to catch and maintain seafood in accordance with fisheries regulations.
Fisheries Manager	Governs fisheries resources and ensures they are maintained for the future.
Fisheries Officer	Manages and conserves fisheries resources by patrolling waterways and inspecting vessels.
Fisheries Scientist	Researches sustainability and development for the future of the industry.
Seafood Processor	Prepares, fillets, preserves and grades a range of seafood products.
Seafood Retailer	Sells fresh, frozen and live seafood.
Seafood Wholesaler, Exporter and Importer	Buys and sells seafood products for distribution locally, nationally and internationally.

Definitions and statistics sourced from the Fisheries Research and Development Corporation (2004).

FISH

- The total value of fish production in 2003-04 was $826.4 million.
- The main methods of fishing include trawling, pond culturing, recirculation methods, raceway, set net, handline, trolling, netting and cage culturing.

ROCK LOBSTER

- The total value of rock lobster production in 2003-04 was $405.6 million.
- Rock Lobster is Australia's single most valuable export.
- The main methods of fishing are by traps and pots. Controls focus on protecting breeding stock and include season closure, pot restrictions and total ban on catching breeding females.

PRAWNS

- The total value of prawn production in 2003-04 was $354.9 million.
- Prawns spend most of their life on, or close to the seabed. They are nocturnal and as such, burrow into the seabed during the day and emerge at night to feed.
- The main methods of prawn fishing are trawling, pond culturing, mesh and haul, nets and beam.

SCALLOPS

- The total value of scallop production in 2003-04 was $23.6 million.
- Scallops tend to be in peak condition during winter to autumn. Scallops spawn during the spring and early summer, with juvenile settlement in the late summer/autumn. Scallop fishing closes during these periods to protect scallops in spawning condition and protect newly settled larvae to maximise recruitment success.
- The main method of fishing for scallop is through dredging and trawling.

PEARLS

- The total value of pearl production in 2003-04 was $460.4 million.
- Pearls are Australia's second most valuable non-edible export.
- Pearling is unique in that it mixes fishing and aquaculture in one industry. Pearl oyster fisheries are managed on a system of individual company quotas with a total allowable catch.

ABALONE

- The total value of abalone production in 2003-04 was $196.1 million.
- Abalone are molluscs that live on rocky reefs and feed on both drifting and attached algae.
- Australia is the world's largest supplier of abalone. A large percentage of the abalone catch is exported to Japan and South East Asia either in cans, live, frozen, dried or boiled.
- Stringent management controls including quotas and strict size limits are enforced to manage the fishery and preserve breeding stock. Fishers first introduced the quota system on a voluntary basis and it has now been taken up as a prime management tool by government.
- Abalone is obtained by diving, raceways and ocean rafts.

TUNA

- The total value of tuna production in 2003-04 was $276.1 million.
- Tuna is a highly migratory species and is widely distributed throughout Australian waters.

OYSTERS

- The total value of oyster production in 2003-04 was $71.8 million.
- New South Wales is the largest producer of edible oysters in Australia.
- Oysters are fished by rack tray and stick.

GROSS VALUE OF PRODUCTION BY SPECIES (WILD CATCH & AQUACULTURE)

Aquaculture Farming of fish or aquatic plants.

Australian Fisheries

The statutory authority responsible for the management of fisheries under Management Authority Australian Government jurisdiction.

Benchmark Point of reference against which change may be measured.

Beneficiaries of fisheries research and development (R&D)

The people who receive the economic, environmental and social benefits of fisheries R&D are the three sectors of the fishing industry, seafood consumers, and the people of Australia.

Biodiversity See ecologically sustainable development.

Crustacea or crustaceans

Arthropod animals, characterised by a hard, close-fitting shell that is shed periodically. Includes prawns, crabs, lobsters, shrimps, bugs and freshwater crayfish.

Customary sector (also referred to as the Traditional sector)

The customary sector comprises enterprises and individuals associated with fisheries resources from which Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people derive products in accordance with their Traditional customs.

Ecologically Sustainable Development (ESD)

Using, conserving and enhancing the community's resources so that ecological processes, on which life depends, are maintained and the total quality of life (now and in the future) can be increased. [Definition of the National Strategy for ESD, 1992].

Ecosystem A community of organisms interacting with each other, and the environment in which they live.

Environmental Management System (EMS)

An environmental management system (EMS) puts in place a continual process of planning, implementing, reviewing and improving the actions that an organisation undertakes to manage its risks and opportunities relating to: the environment; food safety and quality; occupational health and safety; profitability; public relations; and other aspects of the organisation.

EPBC Act

The Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999, which promotes ecologically sustainable development and seeks to conserve biological diversity through an effective, efficient national approach to environmental management at all levels of government.

Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ)

The area between the lines 12 nautical miles and 200 nautical miles seaward of the territorial sea baselines. A lesser distance is declared where the distance between the baselines of Australia and another country is less than 400 nautical miles. The Australian Fishing Zone (AFZ) corresponds closely to the exclusive economic zone.

Fish

In the broadest sense, living aquatic vertebrate and invertebrate organisms, including marine mammals and reptiles, and such organisms after they have been harvested.

Fish products All products derived from fish after the fish have been harvested for sale or consumption.

Fisheries managers

Persons appointed by government agencies to manage Commonwealth, State or Northern Territory fisheries.

Fishery A class of activities by way of fishing, including activities identified by reference to all or any of:

- a species or type of fish;
- a description of fish by reference to sex or any other characteristic;
- an area of water or seabed;
- a method of fishing;
- a class of boats;
- a class of persons; and/or
- a purpose of activities, as determined by the relevant management authority.

Fishing by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people

Includes fishing and shell-collecting by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people in accordance with their Traditional customs (the customary sector of the industry); their recreational fishing (that is, not using customary practices); subsistence fishing (following customary or recreational practices); and commercial fishing.

Fishing industry

Includes any industry or activity conducted in or from Australia concerned with: taking, culturing, processing, preserving, storing, transporting, marketing or selling fish or fish products. There are three principal fishing industry sectors:

- The commercial sector comprises enterprises and individuals associated with wild-catch or aquaculture resources and the various transformations of those resources into products for sale. It is also referred to as the 'seafood industry', although non-food items such as pearls are included among its products.
- The recreational sector comprises enterprises and individuals associated – for the purpose of recreation, sport or sustenance – with fisheries resources from which products are derived that are not for sale.
- The customary sector comprises enterprises and individuals associated with fisheries resources from which Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people derive products in accordance with their Traditional customs.

Harvest To catch or gather wild or aquacultured natural resources.

Key Performance Indicator (KPI)

A specification for measuring performance. Example: benefit-cost ratios for nominated projects.

Landed value The value of a product at the wharf or aquaculture tank, before value-adding. When referring only to aquaculture, the equivalent term of 'farmgate value' is usually used.

Ministerial powers

Powers exercised under the provision of legislation, especially the PIERD Act, by the federal Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry; the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister; or the Minister for Fisheries, Forestry and Conservation. All three ministers exercise ministerial powers in relation to the FRDC, either in their own right or by delegation.

Nutraceuticals Food components that provide demonstrated physiological benefits or reduce the risk of chronic disease, above and beyond their basic nutritional functions. They are similar to 'functional foods' – the distinction being that functional food is similar to a conventional food (examples are breads fortified with Omega-3 polyunsaturated fatty acids, fortified beverages, and cereals fortified with fibre, iron and calcium), whereas a nutraceutical is isolated from a food and sold in dosage form.

Output The goods and services (mainly knowledge, processes and technology) that the FRDC and its R&D partners produce for external organisations or individuals.

PIERD Act The Primary Industries and Energy Research and Development Act 1989, under which the Fisheries Research and Development Corporation (FRDC) is established.

Precautionary principle

Where there are threats of serious or irreversible environmental damage, lack of full scientific certainty should not be used as a reason for postponing measures to prevent environmental degradation. In the application of the precautionary principle, public and private decisions should be guided by:

- careful evaluation to avoid, wherever practicable, serious or irreversible damage to the environment; and
- an assessment of the risk-weighted consequences of various options.

Quality management

Management of all activities through a systematic and determined focus on continual improvement, above minimum levels of performance set by a formal Quality management standard. The standard against which the FRDC is certified is AS/NZS ISO 9001:2000. Other quality management standards suitable for the seafood industry are promoted by Seafood Services Australia.

Recfish Australia

Trading name of the Australian Recreational and Sport Fishing Industry Confederation, the peak body representing the recreational sector of the fishing industry.

Recreational sector

The recreational sector comprises enterprises and individuals associated – for the purpose of recreation, sport or sustenance – with fisheries resources from which products are derived that are not for sale.

Research and development (R&D)

In relation to the fishing industry: systematic experimentation and analysis in any field of science, technology or economics (including the study of the social or environmental consequences of the adoption of new technology) carried out to:

- acquire knowledge that may be of use in obtaining or furthering an objective of the fishing industry, including knowledge that may be of use for the purpose of improving any aspect of the production, processing, storage, transport or marketing of goods that are the produce, or that are derived from the produce, of the fishing industry; or
- apply such knowledge for the purpose of attaining or furthering such an objective; or
- create new or improved materials, products, devices, processes or services for the purpose of attaining or furthering such an objective.

Seafood

Products derived from aquatic natural resources, including fish and fish products, for human consumption.

Seafood industry

The commercial sector of the fishing industry: see fishing industry. Seafood Services Australia A company limited by guarantee, with the FRDC and the Australian Seafood Industry Council as its members, which aims to be proactive in providing an Australia-wide service for people who catch, farm, process, transport, wholesale, retail, export, import or cook seafood. The service includes:

- value-adding through seafood product and process development;
- product quality, food safety and consumer health;
- management systems and standards for quality and ecologically sustainable development;
- market development;
- seafood marketing names;
- seafood emergency management; and
- information and advice on other technical issues.

Social resilience

Relates to the social (including political) capacity of groups of people to effectively develop and represent their interests and to advocate their contributions to the Australian community. Having such a capacity is essential in our robust democratic society, especially if the group is likely to be affected by others who are better at representing their own self-interests. It is widely recognised that the social resilience of the three main sectors of the fishing industry is presently low.

Stakeholders People, organisations or groups with an interest or stake in a line of business. The FRDC's stakeholders are the fishing industry (see definition); the federal, state and the territory governments; and the people of Australia.

Strategy A focus for activities that produce the outputs required to achieve planned outcomes — in the FRDC context, in Program 4 (the Management and Accountability Program).

Supplier A person or organisation engaged by the FRDC to provide goods or services that affect the FRDC's delivery of its outputs. Includes consultants, who are described in the May 1999 issue of the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet Requirements for departmental annual reports.

Sustainable A characteristic of a process or a state that can be maintained indefinitely. See ecologically sustainable development.

Sustainable development

Management and conservation of the natural resource base and the use of technological and institutional change to ensure the attainment of human needs for present and future generations. Such development is environmentally nondegrading, technically appropriate, economically viable and socially acceptable. [UN Food and Agriculture Organization, 2001]

Traditional sector (also referred to as the customary sector)

The customary sector comprises enterprises and individuals associated with fisheries resources from which Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people derive products in accordance with their Traditional customs.

Value-adding Any activity that results in products, processes and services becoming more valuable, competitive, effective and/or efficient, thus increasing financial returns or achieving other desired outcomes. Value-adding elements can include products, processes, packaging, equipment, quality, knowledge gaps and aspects of marketing. Although increased profits are the goal, sometimes new products and processes need to be adopted to enable a business to remain economically viable without increasing economic performance.

As you can never guarantee the media will be able to attend your event, a media launch should only be one part of your overall promotional effort.

INTRODUCTION

Launches can be an effective way of raising your profile and networking with the key influencers in the community. They can be as big (expensive) or small (cost effective) as you want. You will need a plan, so start to write down what you need to do and keep a record of who you have contacted. The following suggestions will help you develop your plan and are made with budget in mind.

1. Decide on your main message and who you need to target

Keep your message as simple as possible (eg. local aquaculture group leading the way). Review the key messages listed in the Seafood EMS Media Guide - 4. What are key messages? and speak with your local industry body or SSA as required.

Assuming you will want to target important people (eg. politicians and business leaders) and your local media, you will need to start compiling a list of contact details for these groups. A list of media outlets is contained in Resource 11 - Media contact list (2006) of this kit (these details will need to be confirmed as phone numbers change on a regular basis). Use your networks to establish who should be invited, contact your industry body or SSA for assistance as required.

Remember, the 'rank' or 'celebrity' of the host or spokesperson for an event can help attract interest so if you have a celebrity or political representative involved, ask them if you can use their name on the invitations!

2. Think about how to make your project/event newsworthy

Certain things can make your event more 'newsworthy'. Does it include:

- New products, equipment or interesting statistics;
- Celebrities or politicians;
- Children or animals; or
- Unusual images or bizarre messages.

Coming up with the right 'angle' can take time – discuss it with your friends, local industry body or SSA as required.

3. Agree with your group on how and where you want to 'launch' the news

One of the best ways is to 'piggyback' on an existing event to help attract the right people and reduce organisational costs (ie. Is there an existing event such as a fair, workshop or business lunch that you could get involved with?). Good media events could include:

- Open Day at the port, fisheries research facility or seafood market;
- Trade fair, seafood festival or industry awards dinner; or
- Farm/hatchery, touch & taste show/lunch.

If you decide to organise your own event, make sure the date you choose for your launch does not clash with holidays, other big events or announcements. It is less likely that media will be able to attend late afternoon or evening functions, as they are usually busy meeting deadlines. Also, you are more likely to get the media to attend a weekday event, rather than on a weekend.

When choosing your date, contact some of your local journalists and talk to them about their deadlines. For example, if a television journalist is interested in your launch they may prefer the event to be in the morning as this gives them the rest of the day to edit the story for a 20 second spot on the six o'clock news. A print journalist will have different deadlines and radio journalist may want to interview your spokesperson live. Try to organise your launch to meet their timing needs but don't be disappointed if something else takes priority for them on the day!

4. Consider allocating event planning to one member of your group and media to another

5. Launch/Event planning

Large events (over 200 people) are complex and often take months to organise. Consider professional assistance if you are planning a large event. Most communities have experience in event management (school fetes, fairs, trade shows etc), so try to tap into these networks if you don't have someone with these skills on-board already. See Tip Sheet 12 - conducting workshops on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems for a good event checklist. The following checklist can also be used to guide you:

- Other events to 'piggy back' on considered;
- Funds to cover cost of desired event secured;
- Venue works for the number of people (including display space, power supply/points, etc.);
- Location is convenient and has plenty of parking (include a map on your invites);
- Spokespeople and key stakeholders are available;
- Shelter (including marquee, seating and/or lighting) arranged if required;
- Wet weather back-up arranged;
- Podium and steps arranged (if required);
- Sound equipment arranged (if required);
- Catering arranged;
- Temperature control (if indoors);
- Wheelchair accessibility considered;
- Signage/banners sourced (speak with your local industry body or SSA);
- Name tags and sign-in sheet printed;
- Running sheet for the day;
- Assistant/s available and briefed on the day;
- Overall safety of venue and activities assessed; and
- Necessary permits and / or approvals obtained (eg. Local Councils).

6. Media planning

Local journalists, producers and editors are usually interested in good local news stories and can be easier to contact and engage than state or national journalists. Speak with them early in your planning process. Talk to any journalists you might know, specialist publications, the editor of the local newspaper, presenters or producers at the radio stations and television news rooms about possible interview, photo or footage opportunities they might like to coordinate with you on the day of the launch.

Draft your Key Message/s (see Media Guide flipchart - Section 4), Media Release (see Tip Sheet 2) and Questions & Answers (see Tip Sheet 1) for your spokespeople. Run through some practice interviews with your spokespeople. Compile your Media Kit (see Tip Sheet 5). Seek assistance from your local industry body or SSA as required.

Newspapers – a picture tells a thousand words. Journalists like a good picture to help define a story. Create a photo opportunity on the same day as the launch, preferably before it begins. Your local newspaper might want to cover a celebrity ‘helping out’ at the docks, cleaning up the waterways or eating some of your product.

Television – news needs action. They need to film something actually happening. While cameras will often obtain brief footage of spokespeople speaking, this alone will rarely be enough for a television news story. This may link with the photo opportunity for the newspaper, for example television news might want to film the celebrity cooking with the chefs in the restaurant kitchen.

Radio – needs audio. Radio journalists will need access to a recording of your spokesperson talking, so that means a phone interview with the spokesperson/s or microphone at the launch. Make sure your spokespeople make time for these phone interviews (landlines are usually better than mobile phones for clarity so try to keep a quiet room with a phone available). You might need to leave some space at the podium for their microphone/recording equipment if they actually attend.

7. Promote your event

You need to raise the profile of the launch with the people you have already decided to target (and the broader community if this is appropriate). In addition to invitations, you should consider advertising, community bulletin boards, websites and articles/inserts into existing newsletters and meeting agendas. Promotional activities are best when they stand out so talk about it and have some fun!

Double check your invitations include speakers’ details, date, time, address, map and contact numbers (to RSVP and for the venue itself in case they have any last minute questions).

Meetings can be a small group having a chat over a cup of coffee, or a larger gathering sitting around a table, working to an agenda. Either way, it is important that you come up with some actions or produce a plan. See Resource 2 - sample contact database and event planner on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems and use the following checklist to help organise the meeting:

Select a venue - the place you want to meet

- Hold the meeting at a venue where everyone will feel comfortable (especially people coming for the first time). Consider access, parking and provision for children; and
- If the meeting is going to run over the lunch period, arrange for catering when booking the venue.

Possible venues for meetings:

- Coffee shop;
- Co-op;
- Someone's home (take turns to host meetings); or
- A meeting hall (if you expect more than 15 people).

Agenda - a list of the things you want to discuss at the meeting

- It might help focus your thinking if you type up an agenda. An agenda is simply a list of the points that you want discussed at the meeting. See Resource 6 - agenda template on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems for an example agenda.

Invitations - asking people to come to the meeting

- The size of a meeting often affects the way we organise invitations. Ring people if it's only a small meeting (four to six people). A written invitation emailed or mailed to each person would be required for larger groups (for example: every southern bluefin tuna fisher from Port Lincoln or Streaky Bay);
- See Resource 5 - letter invitation template on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems for a basic invitation;
- Include the agenda (if you have one) with the invitation; and
- Names and addresses can be obtained for most fishers/aquaculturists from your local or state seafood industry association, or from your State Fisheries Department. See Resource 10 for a list of people who should be able to help.

Prepare the venue - arrive early to set up on the day

- Arrange the seats and layout of the room (if this has not already been done for you). If you want good interaction between people, set up the chairs so that people sit around a table or in a circle – it makes a difference!
- Bring plenty of pens and paper (check if the venue can provide them).

 Starting the meeting - introductions

- Talk to people as they arrive and get to know who they are and what their interests/ issues are;
- At the beginning of the meeting, explain in layman's terms what the meeting is about and why they have been invited;
- Hand out an agenda (if you have one) or write one up on a board;
- Run through the meeting procedures being used, any jargon and abbreviations; and
- Circulate a sheet for everyone to write their name, contact phone, mobile phone number, email, postal address and licence type (this will become your contacts database).

 Running the meeting - stay focused

- Agree to a time the meeting is going to end and watch the time;
- During discussion, stick to the main issues that need to be resolved and try to steer the meeting off topics that are not relevant;
- Ask for comments regularly and call on people who have not said too much;
- Be aware of people's different cultural backgrounds and acknowledge where appropriate;
- Get the group participating as much as possible, rather than dominating the floor with your own ideas;
- Consider asking someone else to chair or rotate the role each meeting;
- Read out the decisions made at the end of the meeting and identify who will action them; and
- Remember – good humour and avoiding conflict often helps.

 Follow-up - email or mail each person a list of what was agreed at the meeting

- After the meeting, follow up with people who attended and those who could not make it. Email or ring them to let them know what happens next, sending a letter/newsletter summarising what happened at the meeting or update the members at the beginning of the next meeting.

 Prepare for the next meeting - send out a newsletter or reminder

It's no good just talking about what should happen. It's up to us to make it happen. That means we are going to have to change people's attitudes and perceptions about our industry. You know what the issues and problems are. Let's get organised and work together towards changing some of those attitudes with some facts and action.

Part of getting organised is not doing it alone. It is working with others in your community who have similar interests and objectives. Networking is about establishing communication links with other people as a means of exchanging ideas and information. It is as simple as six people having coffee and a chat. See Resources 2, 5 and 6 for a contacts database template, letter invitation and agenda example. Use the following checklist for setting up networks:

METHODS

- Use existing networks – like fishing meetings – to recruit helpers;
- Contact people who might be interested – the aim is to build up a network of willing workers to share and achieve your vision (be as inclusive as possible);
- Meet to discuss your ideas and develop a shared vision;
- Encourage everyone to spend time after the meeting to consider all the issues and the vision you've jointly created;
- Make a contact list with names, phone numbers and email addresses and distribute it to all those who attended the meeting and to others who may be interested;
- Make notes on the shared vision of the meeting and distribute this information widely; and
- Build on the strengths of the individuals in the team.

SKILLS REQUIRED

- Ability to communicate ideas to others;
- Ability to listen to the ideas of others;
- Survival level organisational skills for organising and running a meeting;
- Sense of humour, patience and persistence;
- Secretarial skills to record outcomes and compile contact list – computers are essential;
- Within the group it would also be helpful to have some skills or experience in the following:
  - media;
  - writing;
  - secretarial;
  - public speaking; and
  - a wide range of industry experiences and interests.

EVALUATION

- Is there anyone else who should be included?
- Do we have all the skills and resources we need to move on?

FOLLOW UP

- Circulate contact lists and meeting outcomes widely; and
- Recruit additional people with specific skills.

WHO ARE INDUSTRY LEADERS?

Industry leaders are the people in your industry or group who are active in attending industry meetings, are generally confident voicing their opinions and are forward thinkers. They tend to naturally encourage others to become involved in meetings and are leaders of the group.

You will need to identify and encourage your potential leaders and champions. Think about the people in your network and see who has some or all of the following:

- Self-confidence;
- Ability to speak in public;
- Understanding of the issues;
- Balanced view of the issues;
- Respect and or is reasonably well liked;
- Self-motivation;
- Competent writing skills; and
- Understanding of, or experience with, the media.

The challenge is often identifying these people and then encouraging them to take on a more formal leadership role. These leaders are likely to form the management group that will do a lot of the hard work in developing your EMS. They will also lead meetings with wider industry when communicating about your EMS progress or other project ideas.

You will also need to provide them with the support they need to help your group achieve its goals.

Ask them what they need!!

REMEMBER, SOME PEOPLE CAN'T SEE THEIR OWN POTENTIAL – POINT IT OUT!!!

A PICTURE IS WORTH A THOUSAND WORDS...

“I wouldn’t have believed it if I didn’t see it with my own eyes...”

“Every picture tells a story...”

“Give them the big picture...”

Every one of these sayings exists for a reason – a good picture tells us everything we need to know!

The use of your own (high quality) photos in newsletters, presentations, posters and brochures will tell a story that could take pages to tell!

A good image can also ‘make’ a story – so journalists will be interested if you can combine your news with a ‘newsworthy’ image.

Good images capture people, passion and products – all three are better.

So get yourself a digital camera and remember you may be able to claim a tax deduction (as this is a purchase for your business).

The key to taking good photos is to ensure that your digital camera is set to ‘highest quality’, otherwise photos will turn out grainy when printed. Always use a flash and make sure you centre the shot on your target (eg. person). A good photo will always include at least one of or all of the following:

- an aquaculturist/fisher;
- the aquaculture/fishing gear (eg. the farm or boat); and/or
- the product/seafood.

Getting the environment in the background can help to put it in context too. When taking photos of people, make sure they take their sunglasses and hat off if they are wearing them, so that you can see their face.

This is an example of what not to do.

Or just call SSA on 1300 130 321 to enquire about their photo library.

See Tip Sheet 12 - conducting workshops on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems to assist with your planning.

Workshops are a great way of getting industry members involved in your project. A workshop is more interactive than a meeting. Use the following checklist in conjunction with Tip Sheet 12 on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems to help you plan your workshops.

Workshop Plan

When planning activities and organising guest speakers, consider the interests of the participants. Write down some information on the following:

- Objectives (what you need to achieve);
- Content (information you need to provide – see Resource 7 on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems for sample PowerPoint presentations you can tailor to your own group's needs). Also consider guest speakers (for example: a Rock Lobster operator from Tasmania); and
- Activities (how will you engage the participants? – you may consider planning the day so that people break into smaller groups to work on different issues).

Participants and invitations

The workshops you develop will be progress aspects of your business or profession. That means the people you want to invite will be those who are already involved or who have something to offer your business or profession. Think about the following:

- Who will attend (background, age and gender) and how many?
- What do they already know about the subject?
- Will they be familiar with the terms and words you use?
- Who should be a chairperson or facilitator (to help guide the process and keep everyone on time)?

Venue and equipment

Tip Sheet 7 - holding a meeting provides you with a step-by-step process to assist with planning a meeting. Some specific things to consider for the venue include:

- Location and size of room, parking, tables and seating;
- Overhead projector or data projector (for a PowerPoint present<sup>r</sup>);
- Butcher's paper, note pads, pens etc; and
- Catering.

See Resource 3 - Newsletter Template on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems for a sample.

See Resource 8 for a sample brochure and Resource 9 for a fact sheet outline (hardcopy).

The best advice is to look at other brochures that you like and copy the style. It is possible to do a good job on simple brochures by being well organised and following some basic steps:

1. PLANNING

Once you have answered the following questions you can start writing a summary of what you want to say. Ask yourselves:

- Have we clearly defined what the brochure is needed for?
- Who do we want to read the brochure (ie. target audience)?
- What message/s do we need to get across?

2. WRITING

Write to suit your audience (eg. general community or your peers). Ask yourselves:

- Are we using simple words?
- Have we taken or found some pictures to suit the content?
- Have we had someone else read it and give us feedback?

3. PRINTING

Ask yourselves:

- What other brochures have we seen that we like the look of?
- How should we lay out the information and pictures?
- Who can help with printing/photocopying and emailing/mailing?

IF YOU DON'T HAVE DESIGN SKILLS, FIND SOMEONE WHO HAS. IT WILL SAVE A LOT OF HEARTACHE, BE MORE COST EFFECTIVE AND PRODUCE A BETTER RESULT.

See Tip Sheet 14 - Giving Presentations and Talks on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems and print out a blank copy.

See Resource 7 on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems - PowerPoint presentation examples. Tailor the content to suit your EMS!

Giving short talks is a great way to raise the profile of your group. This may be as informal as telling a group of primary school students about oysters, or as formal as presenting at a conference. Seek support if you feel uncomfortable or would like some assistance with your planning.

Please see the following tips on how to improve your presentation skills:

- Prepare a written draft of your presentation well before the event (see 'Talk Structure' overpage);
- Think about who your audience is and write down the key messages you want to get across;
- Give examples to illustrate your points;
- Gather ideas, facts and figures to support your key messages;
- Don't assume the audience knows industry language (so avoid acronyms like EMS!);
- Practice your talk with friends and family (or in front of a mirror!);
- Consider using a PowerPoint presentation or bring part of your fishing/farming equipment with you, for example – a turtle excluding device (TED) or even a copy of your EMS;
- Think about what you are going to wear – something you feel comfortable wearing (eg. you might want to wear something more formal if you are talking to government representatives);
- Talk slowly and DON'T RUSH!!!
- Don't fidget while you are giving your talk, stand tall and keep it simple;
- Smile as much as you can and be ready to answer questions; and
- BE POSITIVE! Your audience will remember your attitude as much as what you say.

YOU MUST USE THE INTERNET AND EMAIL!

Although many people still try to avoid using the internet, it is one of the most important tools you can use when communicating with a large number of people.

THE INTERNET

If you've got access to the internet at home, you are half way there. Just ask a kid how to get onto the 'net. It is very easy to access once you've done it a few times.

If you don't have the internet at home, most libraries have computers with internet access. Ask a friendly librarian to help you through the basics. Alternatively you can go to an internet café – these are listed in the yellow pages.

Once you are using the internet, the key is to use what is called a 'search engine'. For example, type into the address bar www.google.com, www.yahoo.com or www.live.com.

Once you have the search page on your screen, simply type in the word "aquaculture", for example, and hundreds of sites will show on your screen.

EMAILING

Having an email address is essential. Without it, you will likely miss out on important information.

To get started you need access to a computer and the internet.

The first step is to set up an email address for yourself. You can set up an email address for free online. For example, you can go to the website www.hotmail.com or www.yahoo.com and follow the instructions for setting up a free email address. Many websites offer this service.

The website instructions will ask you to choose a name for your email address. Most people choose to use their name, for example, fredjones23@hotmail.com or DebrahSmith444@yahoo.com. You will also need to set up a password for your free email account.

Once you are set up, you can use the website and your new email address and password to check your emails on any computer anywhere (as long as it has access to the internet).

You should aim to check your emails daily and send emails to people when you first get set up to let them know what your new address is.

Websites that are VERY simple and easy to 'navigate' are ALWAYS the best. Planning, creating and maintaining a website is time consuming.

Find someone who knows how to do it or consider paying a professional!

Regardless, developing a website will involve six basic steps:

- STEP 1. Planning;
- STEP 2. Content development;
- STEP 3. Graphic design;
- STEP 4. Web hosting and domain names;
- STEP 5. Marketing and promotion; and
- STEP 6. Maintenance.

STEP 1. Planning

What will your website look like and what features will it contain? Write it down on paper using a stepwise approach:

- List desired features;
- Map preferred layout and navigation options;
- Write content text; and
- Prioritise visual preferences (ie. images, design etc.).

Many web development companies can help you with all phases of the process. Do an online search to identify local companies.

STEP 2. Content development

To formulate ideas, see how other companies have structured and designed their websites. Think about your target audience and what message/s you want to get across to them. Write down what you want on the site.

STEP 3. Web development

Building the webpages – you would need to understand web 'authoring' tools such as Microsoft Frontpage or Dreamweaver. This also involves using graphic elements and photos etc., Hyper Text Mark-up Language (HTML), uploading data and testing your site.

STEP 4. Web hosting and domain name registration

Choose a web hosting service that meets your website design requirements. Be sure to register a domain name (www.yourcompany.com) as soon as you are even thinking of building a website. Search the internet for domain name registration options and do a price comparison.

STEP 5. Promotion

Get your website indexed. Search engine promotion and submission strategies. Proper keyword selection. Search engine ranking and website optimisation rules.

STEP 6. Maintenance

Ongoing website promotion, traffic analysis, website performance, links testing, popularity testing, host performance.

“You can never be sure what people are thinking... until you ask them”.

Consulting with people can provide you with additional information to help inform decisions and build support for new ideas or products. There are a number of ways you can get feedback from people. The right approach will depend on who you need to consult with and what information you need from them.

1. Who do you need to consult with?

- Local community;
- Buyers/Agents;
- Advisory bodies/Environmental specialists;
- Industry/Professional groups/NGOs; or
- Government/Regulatory bodies.

2. What kind of information you need?

- Strategic (eg. how to plan for a new political, environmental or financial constraint);
- Professional/Technical (eg. how to improve your business or operational efficiency); or
- Marketing (eg. how to position your business or products).

3. Which approach is most appropriate for the task?

	Strategic	Professional / Technical	Marketing
Local community	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Meetings</li> <li>• Existing community groups (eg. Chamber of Commerce)</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Newsletter</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Focus groups</li> <li>• Exhibitions &amp; displays</li> <li>• Surveys</li> <li>• Radio talk-back or advertising (requesting feedback)</li> <li>• Complaints mechanism</li> </ul>

An open day provides a high level of participation and usually has displays and activities.

Use your networks to see if there is another event you can 'piggy-back' on. If you can't team up with an organiser from another event, consider one of the following:

- Open day at the port, fisheries research facility or a seafood market;
- Shopping centre display;
- In-store demonstration;
- Farm/hatchery, touch and taste show or trade fair displays (industry or career);
- Seafood festival; or
- Seafood industry awards (refer to your state industry association for details).

Ideas and perceptions formed by children often stay with them throughout their life. See Tip Sheet 19 on the website, www.seafood.net.au/ems for an example of some basic seafood education handouts for school kids. However before you consider developing new seafood education resources, access the many that already exist (see the list below for examples, most of which can be sourced from SSA).

There will be people in your network with school children who can approach the school or a teacher to arrange some activities. Look for someone in your group with teaching experience to help guide your school seafood education activities.

Contact the careers guidance officers at your local secondary schools. Encourage industry visits, work experience placements, traineeships and high school marine studies. You should also inform them of the benefits of a career in seafood and the training opportunities and incentives available. The seafood industry can be studied as a primary industry in classes such as social studies, geography and economics.

Each high school in Australia can access a copy of the Seafood Industry Implementation and Assessment Guide, which is a great resource for vocational studies in seafood.

SPONSORSHIP

Sponsorship is about getting a person or business to provide money in exchange for something else. You should therefore focus on what you can offer the sponsor, such as exposure to a new or existing market, sales and promotion, or just the opportunity to provide a community service.

Remind them that it would be a tax deduction. Another option is to have a joint project with a local service club. They are often looking for worthwhile community activities to be involved in.

This is particularly useful for seafood festivals and big events, as well as providing expertise and additional helpers in the project.

Steps for getting sponsorship:

1. Identify and list businesses or organisations that might be interested in supporting the activity. The most likely sponsors will be ones where you already have contacts;
2. Write a letter, phone or visit those on your list and explain what the project is about, providing details about the contributors (who, what, when, where, why and how); and
3. Offer them the opportunity to be a sponsor and highlight what is in it for them.

FUNDRAISING

First decide how much money you want (a fundraising target) and what you want the money for.

There are many ways of getting funding for local activities. For example:

- Raffles (get the prizes donated from local businesses and sell the tickets through places such as seafood retailers, service stations and pubs);
- Prawn or sausage sizzles (try to get goods donated or at reduced prices and use the event as a networking opportunity!!);
- Cricket matches (these events encourage community building and can involve the whole family);
- Selling a calendar or seafood cookbook;
- Golf days; or
- 'Casino' nights with finger food.

FUNDING MAJOR PROJECTS

If you are after 'big dollars', a more formal funding proposal will help. There are many government funding initiatives supporting worthwhile projects. It's a matter of finding them and then producing an application that's outstanding and meets the funding guidelines. You will need to make sure your group is a legal entity (see the SSA Seafood EMS Self-assessment and Training Manual for more details).

Department of Transport and Regional Services manages CRIS (Commonwealth Regional Information Service) which provides information on Commonwealth Government programs and services available to people living in regional, rural and remote Australia. It is produced in a booklet and available on their website at www.regionalaustralia.gov.au.

Grants link at www.grantslink.gov.au provides information on all granting programs available from the Australian Government. It should be noted that this site only contains information on Commonwealth assistance programs;

Business Entry Point at www.business.gov.au has a Government and business directory which contains details for federal, state, territory and local governments and business associations; and

The Australian Government, through AusIndustry and the Innovation Access Program, has funded the Australian Industry InnovationXchange Network www.innovationxchange.com.au through the Australian Industry Group. The website is constantly updated with the latest information on many aspects including information on government assistance across all jurisdictions.

- www.nrm.gov.au

There are also many state-based funding programs available. Go to the state government websites for more funding options.

REMEMBER: ALWAYS CONTACT THE FUNDING BODY AND TALK THROUGH YOUR PROJECT WITH THEM TO ASK FOR GUIDANCE ON WRITING THE APPLICATION.

* Note: contact your professional body or SSA on 1300 130 321 for assistance

Few political decisions are made without pressure being applied via either the media or personal lobbying. Lobbying Members of Parliament (MPs) can be valuable if you want to:

- Influence a decision that is about to be made by Parliament; or
- Force consultation on an issue and gain the support of policy makers.

Meeting with an MP in person is an effective way to demonstrate how strongly you feel about a particular issue. It's also a good way to find out how they feel about the issue.

DUTIES OF MPs

Local MPs have duties towards you as a voter in their electorate. You can ask them for help in:

- Dealing with government departments; or
- Approaching local businesses;

You can also ask them to present a petition to Parliament and they are obliged to do this. If you ask an MP to take up an issue that falls in the responsibility of a Minister, your MP must pass on the information to that Minister.

MEETING WITH MPs

If you plan to meet with an MP, it helps to write first. Letters demonstrate the amount of interest you have for the issue. They also give the MP something to refer to in your meeting. Try to maximise your credibility by:

- Making your argument clear and reasonable;
- Being specific about your objections, aims and ideas for solutions;
- Providing evidence of local support for your issue; or
- Showing them relevant press clippings or a briefing paper on the issue.

Once you've written to an MP requesting a meeting, phone to make an appointment. Make sure you prepare for the meeting and have at hand all the information you need. It's useful to leave some information with the MP so they have something to refer to and pass on to relevant people.

Before you leave the meeting, try to get a clear commitment of the sorts of assistance the MP will provide. Don't settle for vague promises.

FOLLOW-UP

After the meeting, make sure you write back to the MP thanking them for the meeting and outlining what you discussed – particularly reminding them of any promises they may have made. Don't let them forget!

To be effective in reaching your audience (which includes other aquaculturists or fishers etc., government and the community), you will need to be prepared to discuss your EMS and other issues at any time.

You already 'live' your work – now you need to share it!

Some of the ways in which you can do this include:

- Make sure you always have a few copies of your newsletters, brochures or fact sheets in the car, on the boat or at work;
- Carry a small card (eg. business card size) with the name of your industry group, the key issues you're facing and the key messages you have about those issues;
- Ask your local retailers if you can leave promotional material in-store and think about ways to raise the profile of your environmentally superior product (eg. using chalk to draw a green fish on the footpath out the front of the shop and promoting the fact that this means they supply 'environmentally superior' products);

- Align and unite with national seafood promotion activities (eg. Clean Up Australia Day, Australia Day or World Environment Day etc.).

Three recommended key messages are:

1. Aquaculturists (or insert fishers, pearling or oyster farmers, etc.) are protecting Australia's waterways;
2. Australian seafood businesses are focused on the environment; and
3. Sustainable oyster farming (or insert your appropriate sector) means high quality Australian seafood will always be available.
